

WYNEKOOP TRIAL IN BALANCE

OPEN NEW FIGHT
FOR UNIFIED AIR SERVICE IN U. S.Congress Expected to Be Stage.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(Special.)—On the promise that the next great war almost certainly will be a struggle in the air, leaders of congress have recommended their efforts to achieve a unified air service for the United States.

Through all the centuries of battle between nations heretofore the major struggles were between great massed forces on land or impressive battle fleets on sea, and airplanes played rather a minor part.

But the next war is held to promise the ultimate in air combat, with battles between armadas of flying ships, with bombs raining death upon military camps and upon civilians in the cities, with battleships attacking warships and coast works.

So rapidly is trans-Atlantic flying progressing, it is declared, that within a year, or several years at most, possibilities may open for the dispatching of great fleets of hundreds of air bombers across the sea to bring death and fear and destruction to American cities, and then to fly back to the country whence they came.

Deery Unpreparedness.

Whatever the mode of warfare, it is the contention of the congressional critics, and they are backed by such military authorities as former Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, that the American army and navy are not preparing adequately for the eventualities.

The army and navy, of course, dispute this charge, and the chief of staff of the army, Maj. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, goes so far as to doubt the wisdom of concentrating overmuch, as he believes, on air offensives and defenses.

That the whole problem will be aired during the present session of congress seems likely, for it is, first of all, the major objective of a bill to be put in by the Democratic house leader, Representative Joseph W. Byrns of Tennessee, consolidating the war and navy departments and setting up separate divisions for army, navy and air activities.

Secondly, in the proposed inquiry into military and naval expenditures to be launched by the house military affairs committee under Chairman John J. McSwain (Dem., S. C.), the question of a separate unified air corps is also raised.

Calls Three Systems Folly.

Representative Byrns declares that the present existence of three separate air corps, each functioning independently of the others, is "sheer folly." The army has its air corps, the navy another and the marine corps a third, and various congressional critics have at times pointed out the ludicrous anomalies which have resulted.

One congressman told of his army pilot being threatened with punishment by a naval officer because the pilot had run his wheels into the naval section of adjoining army and navy fields in California. Representative Byrns said the mechanics in the separate machine shops at the navy and army parts of Bolling field will not even lend tools to one another.

Another complaint to be aired by the congress is that inadequate attention is paid by army and navy management to the necessity of giving military flyers proper training in other branches of the fighting art.

Elsewhere in the military establishment, as the officers get older, it is pointed out, their numbers are thinned by death, and as they become less competent to fight they can take up various administrative duties.

Air Corps All Officers.

But the air corps consists almost exclusively of officers, who are seldom taught anything else, and in many cases when they become too old any longer to qualify as air fighters there is no place for them to go.

The war department experts have put the maximum age for air fighters at 40 to 45 and the maximum number of years of flying at 20. Other experts call a flyer useless for battle at 35 years of age, after 10 years of flying. While the army experts point out that many much older men, some up to 70, are still expert flyers, it is reckoned that such men are useless in the terrific strain of aerial combat.

It is declared at the war department that with this early senility of air men in mind, places have been opened for a proportionately larger number of men in the army schools. But when the numbers admitted were asked for, it was learned that only 17 air officers

ASKS CONGRESS
QUIZ OF FEDERAL PRISON FAVORSSimpson Moves for Investigation.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(Special.)—Congress will be asked tomorrow to launch a special investigation into the treatment accorded powerful underworld figures in federal penitentiaries.

Prompted, he said, by "several recent incidents," indicating that influential gang leaders are able to wheedle special favors from prison officials.

Representative James Simpson Jr., young Chicago Republican, announced today that he will introduce a resolution authorizing the house judiciary committee to proceed at once with the inquiry.

Prompted by Revelations.

Mr. Simpson's action, it was understood, was prompted by revelations made by The Chicago Tribune last summer regarding the unheard of privileges enjoyed by "Terry" Druggan, notorious Chicago beer lord, while a prisoner at Leavenworth penitentiary. Another of the "recent incidents" to which the congressman referred, it was said, was the parole of William Donovan, Evergreen Park mail robber, while he was under a perjury indictment.

Both cases will be thoroughly aired under the terms of the Simpson resolution, but the scope of the inquiry will permit a complete and intensive investigation into the treatment of other powerful gangsters now serving time in government penal institutions.

Current reports that Al Capone, one-time overlord of Chicago crime, is treated with special consideration in the federal prison at Atlanta will be looked into.

Win Privileged Treatment.

"It has become apparent to me from several recent incidents that powerful underworld figures, convicted and sentenced for their crimes, are able to secure preferential and privileged treatment in our federal prisons," said Mr. Simpson in announcing the introduction of his resolution.

"I am calling on congress for an immediate investigation into what appears to be a disgraceful situation. In light of facts already known I believe the law abiding citizens of the country are entitled to reassurance that their efforts to segregate public enemies from society will not be wasted. The facts surrounding at least two known cases in which powerful gangsters, either through bribery or threats, have wheedled special considerations from prison officials should be brought to light without delay."

Wardens May Be Called.

"I intend to push this resolution for early passage in the house, in the belief that such an inquiry at this time may serve to ward off what threatens to become a national scandal."

It is probable that the judiciary committee will summon the principal figures in the Druggan "scandal" to testify before it if the house approves the Simpson resolution. Wardens of the federal penitentiaries at both Leavenworth, Kan., and Atlanta, Ga., are expected to be called, as well as officials of the prison bureau here and members of the federal parole board.

The Druggan case was unearthed by prison bureau officials last summer at the request of The Chicago Tribune and resulted in the discharge of Deputy Warden Patrick J. Kearney, Chaplain James A. Ordine, and two other prison officials. Warden R. H. Hudepeth was summoned to Washington and subjected to a severe censure by officials of the federal bureau.

An investigation conducted by Assistant Prison Director J. V. Bennett disclosed that Terry Druggan, elevated to the status of a trusty, was permitted to leave the prison almost at will, have his meals outside the institution, and pay frequent calls upon his sweetheart.

Runs Business by Phone.

Druggan, the investigation revealed, was running his beer business by long distance phone from Leavenworth. Reports that he achieved his favored status by the disbursement of some $1,000 a month among lesser prison officials have never been investigated, as far as is known.

Donovan was paroled on Nov. 11, 1933, after serving five years of an eight year sentence for participating in the 1928 mail robbery at Evergreen Park, Ill. At the time of his parole Donovan was wanted for at least two other robberies, and was under indictment for perjury. Parole board officials explained that they had not known the facts when they granted him clemency and Donovan was released.

ROB LIQUOR SHOP, BUT FIRST SERVE DRINKS ON HOUSE

Six gunmen invaded the Hamilton Wine and Liquor store at 642 North Clark street yesterday while the manager, Sam Cicaleo, 1703 West Grand avenue, completed the stock arrangements for opening day. Five casualties who had been permitted to stand in the store were forced by the robbers to assist in carrying out 70 cases of whiskey and gin valued at $12,000.

"Have a drink first, you fellows," the bandit leader told the men. The five hesitated and one said, "But the boss might kick." The robbers then tied Cicaleo's hands and feet and placed him lengthwise on the floor. "Go ahead, now, drink," the bandit ordered, and the men drank, long and thankfully.

The liquor then was carried out and loaded into a truck in the alley. After the bandits had driven away the five men went back into the store, untied Cicaleo, and apologized for having had to drink his liquor.

DIES WHILE HE PREPARES FOR WEDDING TRIP

Raymond Goldberger, vice president and midwest sales manager for the Manhattan Shirt company, died in his apartment at the Seneca hotel, apparently of a heart attack, yesterday a few minutes before he planned to go to Waikiki to be married. He was 42 years old. Physicians said he had been in poor health for some time, suffering from high blood pressure.

Miss Eunice Welsh, a buyer for a St. Louis department store, the bride-to-be, was at the apartment when Goldberger was stricken. She called a hotel physician, who pronounced Goldberger dead. She said her fiancé had met her at a train in the morning and the couple had just finished breakfast when Goldberger collapsed.

The body was removed to a mortuary at 936 East 47th street for shipment to St. Louis. Goldberger's mother, Mrs. Frances Goldberger, and his brother, Sidney, both of that city, survive.

Pair of Holdup Men Rob County Hospital Chaplain

The Rev. Andrew Cook of St. Ignace parish was robbed near Harrison and Wood streets last night by two men as he was walking toward the county hospital, where he serves as chaplain. One of the robbers pinned his arms behind his back, while the other searched him, taking $3, an electrical hearing aid device valued at $110, and a leather briefcase containing a pair of spectacles. They then released him and ran away.

Organizes 30 Deputies.

Lieut. McGillen organized 30 highway deputies in squads under command of himself and Sergeants. Antonio Paulus, Nicholas Bule and Harry Seigel.

These squads raided the homes of alleged members of the ring in Posen, Tinley Park, Blue Island, and Dixmoor. The first raid netted nine prisoners. Seven more were captured yesterday.

Between the raids the highway police carried on the work of recovering loot. In a muddy lot just outside of Posen, at 1428 street and Western avenue, they found an "auto cemetery." Digging a few feet into the mud by the light of auto headlights two squads of highway police found a half dozen complete engines and a mass of accessories.

Manholes Hide Loot.

In the manholes the other two squads were recovering other loot in various hiding places of the ring. Two motors were found concealed in a haystack, six others buried in back yards of the prisoners, and two more in manholes.

From information obtained from partial confessions of the prisoners, Lieut. McGillen said the gang stole cars in Chicago and occasionally in suburbs. The thieves, according to the confesions, would receive cash on delivery to a garage in Posen. The amount ranged from $15 to $50, depending on the make of the car. Lieut. McGillen said.

Within twenty-four hours of a theft the car would be stripped, according to the confessions. In most cases parts bearing numbers would be buried at night. In some instances the thieves interchanged motors in cars to avoid detection.

Alleged Leader a Youth.

The alleged leader of the gang is Stanley Zawlas, 20 years old, 1504 Sherman avenue, Posen, known as "Tom Mix" because he carries two pistols, police said. Zawlas has served six months in the Bridgeway on an auto theft charge, according to police.

The two older men arrested as "fences" are Albert Stahke, 41 years old, 2059 West 138th street, Blue Island, and Alex Klebanowicz, 51, owner of a tavern at 145th street and Marshfield avenue, Dixmoor.

The other prisoners are Michael Krygowski, 18; Joseph Czapel, 18; John Dziennik, 21; Henry Zawlas, 18, brother of Stanley; Edward Janeski, 28; Albert Kowalski, 22; Stanley Karp, 17; Edward Baronski, 18; Edward Ostrowski, 21; Leo Kosak, 21; and Joseph Matela, 20, all of Posen; Frank Ciekowski, 24, Tinley Park, and James Kilroy, 19, of Blue Island.

Krygowski, Dziennik and Kilroy said they are employees of the civil works administration. The majority of the others are unemployed.

Fear Bremer

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Probability that Edward Bremer, kidnapped St. Paul banker, had been slain resulted in the dispatch of a squad of federal agents to Anoka county today to assist local authorities in an intensive search of the area.

Anoka is 20 miles from Minneapolis, where the postmaster, W. C. Robertson, yesterday received an anonymous letter stating the 37 year old son of Adolph Bremer, principal owner of the Jacob Schmidt Brewing company and personal friend of President Roosevelt, had been "bumped off."

Chief of Police Thomas Dahill here branded the missive the work of a crank. In the lower left hand corner of the note, penned in ink on stationery of the Union City mission in Minneapolis, was what might have been a rough diagram of three roads, the printed letter "A" and a curved line.

Cover 350 Miles.

More than 350 miles had been covered up to noon today by Sheriff O. M. Olson, Deputy Sheriff Mike Aupis, and Jim Westlake, a game warden, who investigated particular curves in the roads and any suspicious irregularities in surface snow. One side of the Mississippi river bank from Anoka to Minneapolis has been investigated and efforts today were concentrated on the other, on the theory that the curved line on the mysterious letter might represent the river.

They were accompanied by federal department of justice investigators, whose force here has been increased since the Bremer automobile, its interior profusely blood stained, was found shortly after his abduction last Wednesday.

Silence Adds to Fear.

Anxiety for Bremer's life was heightened in the face of the death threat in the first and only note from the kidnappers, left at the rear of the office of Walter W. Magee, wealthy St. Paul contractor and friend of the Bremers, and the fact the customary second note with instructions for paying the ransom has not been received by any one.

The note bore Bremer's signature in a shaky scrawl. The family was represented as being determined to refuse paying the ransom unless a second note signed by Bremer with instructions for payment is received.

The elder Bremer, in seclusion at his home in a serious nervous condition aggravated by worry over his son's life, was attended yesterday by a physician. He was represented as being much better today.

Family Awaits Word.

Communication from the kidnappers, paving the way for contact and payment or arrangements for payment, was still awaited by the family as the 104th hour had passed at 4 p. m. since Bremer's seizure, without word from his abductors.

The theory that Bremer might have been killed was voiced in Washington by Joseph B. Keenan, assistant attorney general of the justice department's division of criminal prosecution.

Keenan declared "in the Bremer case we may have the misfortune of experiencing another Lindbergh situation."

Explaining that the justice department is exerting every effort to cooperate with the elder Bremer's request for law enforcement agencies to assist in their attempts to apprehend the kidnappers until his son was safely returned, he added:

"Meanwhile we are attempting to keep negotiations secret."

JUDGE TO DECIDE ON GOING AHEAD WITH HEARINGDoctors Will Report on Their Findings.

Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, whose collapse from chronic ailments last Friday halted her trial for the murder of her daughter-in-law, Rheta Wynekoop, was reported last night to be "still a very sick woman." This report added to the uncertainty of whether her trial would be resumed this morning.

The question of whether her case is to go on is up to Judge Joseph B. David, the presiding judge. He will give his decision shortly after 10 o'clock this morning. His action will be based upon a medical report made by three appointed physicians. Up to midnight last night there was no taking anywhere as to what the doctors' findings were or what Judge David might do.

Three Courses Open.

Judge David has three principal courses which he may pursue in deciding the unique situation.

If the physicians report that Dr. Wynekoop might die if subjected to the strain of a resumption of the trial Judge David could declare a mistrial. This would definitely terminate the case, until such time as Dr. Wynekoop's condition improved sufficiently to withstand a retrial.

Should the doctors report that Dr. Wynekoop's condition is not necessarily critical, Judge David could order a definite delay to allow her to recover her strength.

If the physicians were to declare Dr. Wynekoop physically able to stand an immediate resumption of the trial, the judge could then order the case to proceed at once.

Jail Physician Skeptical.

Last night the question of whether Dr. Wynekoop's trial would be resumed was almost as much an enigma in its temporary way as is the murder of Rheta. Dr. Constantine Theodore, assistant jail physician and the last medical man to examine the defendant, declared it would be highly dangerous for her to appear in court this morning unless she showed a decided improvement during the night.

"Her pulse pressure during the day was 90 and her blood pressure was 170," said Dr. Theodore. "The blood pressure is much too high."

Dr. Wynekoop is 62 years old. Her family and attorneys fear that, due to the high blood pressure, she will suffer a paralytic stroke if kept under the strain of the trial. Physicians have conceded such a danger exists. For her own part, Dr. Wynekoop has frequently expressed a wish to go through with the trial, regardless of her illness.

Names Medical Committee.

When she collapsed Friday—24 hours after a previous breakdown, Judge David cut the trial short, continued it Thursday, and appointed Drs. Arthur Byrnes, Frank Chavet and William D. McNally as a medical committee to examine Dr. Wynekoop. He instructed them to keep their separate findings secret and report to him Friday. The physicians made their examinations, but have since remained mum on their analyses.

There was also an independent examination made by a medical committee engaged by Dr. Wynekoop's old defense lawyer, William W. Smith. They are Drs. Chauncey Maher and Earle Gray. Like their colleagues they, too, withheld their findings.

This defense move was eyed with interest by Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty, chief prosecutor. He interpreted it to mean that Attorney Smith feared the court appointed doctors might find Dr. Wynekoop physically able to go on at the trial, and wished to counter with the report of his own specialists.

Dougherty to Oppose Delay.

Mr. Dougherty said last night that he would insist upon a resumption of the trial today, and he went about preparing to call witnesses as if the assumption were assured. He admitted that Judge David can, in his own discretion, declare a mistrial, if he is convinced a continuation of the hearing would endanger Dr. Wynekoop's life. The prosecutor pointed out, however, that in many cases where defendants were seriously ill they have been carried into court or the court has been moved to their bedside.

Nether Mr. Dougherty nor the defense lawyers would predict whether Dr. Wynekoop would appear in court today. Dr. Francis W. McNamara, chief jail physician, was likewise uncertain. Ordinarily the presence of a defendant is always required whenever any action in the trial is contemplated, and ordinarily Dr. Wynkoop would be expected in court today if it were not for the delay.

There is no precedent for an inquest, said Dr. McNamara last night. "In my experience of more than twenty years at the jail I have never heard of a prisoner being brought from the jail to court in a cot or on a stretcher. It is the duty of the warden to send a defendant to court on the day scheduled, but whether he is compelled to send a sick prisoner into court I can't say."

At the present there is no court order on the matter. If the court's medical committee report Dr. Wynkoop well enough to be on hand and she isn't there, some one may be held in fault. On the other hand if the warden sends her into court and the medical report is against that, there is trouble again.

Dr. McNamara said he would try to solve his end of the problem by examining Dr. Wynkoop at 3:30 p. m. this morning, and then send word to Judge David as to his findings.

Plans Examination Today.

Dr. McNamara did not see Dr. Wynkoop yesterday, but was kept in touch with her condition up to midnight by reports from Dr. Theodore and other jail attendants. One of them, Master Anna Jacobs, pictured Dr. Wynkoop as "tired and weak."

Dr. Wynkoop spent the day quietly. Oftentimes she stared blankly at the jail hospital walls. She refrained from reading her favorite book, the Bible. For breakfast she had coffee, toast, and an orange. Her lunch consisted of white chicken and orange. Her supper was liquid. During the day Dr. Theodore administered digitals, a heart stimulant, which seemed somewhat helpful. At 9 o'clock last night the doctor came to a restless sleep.

Meanwhile, the twelve jurors who will determine Dr. Wynkoop's fate in the trial continue, remained isolated in a special section of the jail yesterday and last night. Some listened to radio programs, others played rumormongers. Church services were not available to them. Neither were newspapers.

Reactions to Judge's Remarks.

Just what their reactions to the sudden halting of the case on Friday are none could say. Whether Judge David's remarks to them at the time struck them as significant was equally problematical. The judge's words were: "Gentlemen, circumstances have arisen which make necessary the continuance of this trial to Monday morning. I feel certain you will not have to spend another week-end here, so please make the best of it."

Groundwork for Motive.

Already he has sought to lay a groundwork showing that one of the motives for Dr. Wynkoop's alleged murder of Retha was to gain financially through insurance. The doctor had insured the girl shortly before the murder. The murder was committed last November in the Wynkoop home at 3408 Monroe street.

There is also another alleged motive why Dr. Wynkoop should want to murder Retha, in the opinion of Dougherty, that concerned the doctor's son, Earle, husband of the girl. Earle, the prosecutor charges, was a trifle in feminine hearts and wanted to be rid of Retha. His mother knew his desire, Dougherty asserts.

BYRD STRUGGLES TO UNLOAD SHIP ON CRUMBLING ICE

Reclaims Buried Winter City in Little America.

Berthed alongside the constantly crumbling face of the bay ice two and one-half miles northwest of Little America, the iron ship lay almost half-way between the east and west barrier walls.

Close to midnight last night the five tractors equipped with wide treads for snow navigation were hoisted from the hold and swung out upon the ice. Their engines were started in the hold, and as soon as the bridge suspending them was slipped a derrick hooped in and drove off.

Ice Leans Out Over Water.

The second tractor had just dropped when a crack opened up in front of it and a huge piece of ice leaned out over the water toward the ship.

"Stand back," somebody yelled from the deck. "She is going to let go." Pete Demas, chief of the tractor division, jumped into the vehicle, pulled over the throttle and shot away just in time. The whole piece of ice on which the machine had rested collapsed and plunged into the water as he cleared it.

This morning a pillar of black smoke climbed into the sky. A tractor had caught fire. Admiral Byrd and several men snatched fire extinguishers and rushed out but did not reach it before the wooden parts had been consumed.

Another Tractor Catches Fire.

A moment later another tractor burst into flames which were extinguished just in time. The drivers were unhurt. Two more tractors went out of commission with engine trouble. It seemed that each time a piece of cargo was unloaded a piece of ice broke from the end of the pack and each time the boom swung farther and farther out.

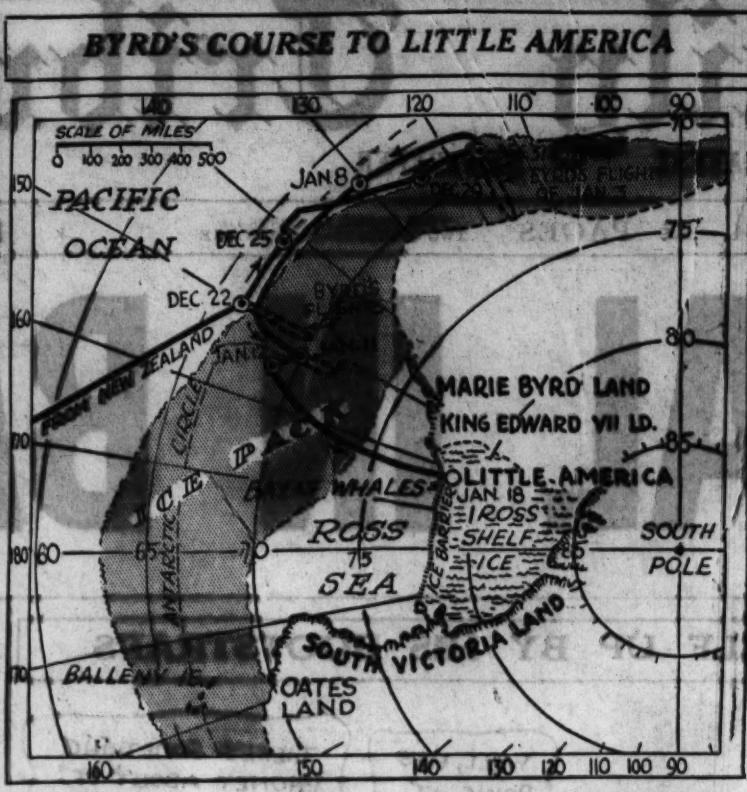

"You've got to keep this stuff moving," Byrd commanded. "Get it on the ice and then move it back. You'll have time to rest this winter out in Little America."

The task of reclaiming the buried winter city was going on simultaneously. The buildings had been located and found intact.

Meteorologist Haines dug into the administration building and located the roof of the weather station from which he is to release balloons for height altitude observations, such as were taken in 1930. Three feet down he broke into a layer of hard ice and finally through the roof. He dropped into the hole. Admiral Byrd and the rest plunged in after him. Byrd found a fruit jar half full of kerosene which had been his reading lamp. He lit it.

Find Side of Roast Beef.

On the table were a pot of frozen coffee and a side of roast beef. Dr. Coman had lunched on it four years ago while he was waiting for the fast sledge to come for Howard Mason, who was stretched out in a bunk, stricken with appendicitis. Even a fork was left stuck into the roast. There were 1939 calendars on the

Kills Wife, Makes a Will, Holds Reception Over Body

Centerville, Mass., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—After making his two line will at a neighbor's home Hjalmar Karl, 69 years old, Finnish cranberry grower, invited friends into his house to view the body of his wife, Annie, 69 years old, whom he had slain with a shotgun over a $100 loss.

Finns Name on Wall.

Young Renne held the light to the wall and revealed his own name, printed out there by his father. Nobody remembered seeing it before. Apparently the elder Renne had written it just before he left.

The door of the mess hall was found to be standing open. A pair of pajamas hung over the foot of one of the bunks. The clock on the wall had stopped at 4:30. There were meat and crackers on the table and pots of frozen food stood on the stove.

A photograph was nearby. The needle was poised over a record. Somebody cranked the machine and at the first strain of music Byrd and Haines burst into laughter. The tune was "The Ball of St. Mary's." Quinn Blackburn used to play it twenty-three years ago. He was standing by, and grinned shyly.

Some one flipily slipped a switch and the lights of the building went on. Another pressed the telephone connection in the administration building. Dr. Foulter picked up another phone. After four years, everything worked.

Hooper, a Republican who has represented the district more than eight years, is thoroughly disgusted with the rubber stamp activities of congress. State Senator J. T. Upjohn, Republican, has formally announced his candidacy.

Funeral services for Edward J. Brundage, who died Saturday in his Lake Forest home from a gunshot wound "apparently self-inflicted," according to the coroner's jury, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the Oriental consistory, 319 North Dearborn street. The rites will be conducted by Eugene Park commandery, Knights Templar, of which Mr. Brundage was a past commander. Private services for the family will be held earlier.

The body of the former attorney general of Illinois and state Republican leader will lie in state at the temple one hour before the service, where it will be viewed by friends and associates of Mr. Brundage. Burial will be in Rosehill cemetery.

Although the coroner's jury had returned the verdict of "apparent" suicide Saturday, officials of Lake county yesterday were continuing the investigation of Mr. Brundage's death. This was done at the request of State's Attorney Charles E. Mason, who said he had been told that Mr. Brundage's financial affairs were not in sufficiently bad shape to inspire his suicide.

With Coroner John L. Taylor, Chief of Police Frank Tiffany, and Fred Wendan, undertaker and member of the coroner's jury, State's Attorney Mason went to the Lake Forest mortuary, where the bullet which passed through Mr. Brundage's heart, lodging in his back, was removed. It was the opinion of the Chicago police that the bullet unquestionably was fired from a .25 caliber revolver which was lying on the edge of the floor of an open safe, before which the victim was shot. They added that the gunshot wound undoubtedly was self-inflicted and expressed the opinion that members of the family share this conviction.

The bullet is to be examined by Calvin Goddard, ballistics expert of the Northwestern university crime laboratory. Forensic examinations are being taken. State's Attorney Mason explained, because in a previous Lake county case a body was buried without removal of a bullet, presumably accidentally fired, and a request was later made for exhumation of the body.

Some Uncertainty Shown.

The fact that a handkerchief covered the butt of the pistol in the shooting and that a few spots of blood were on the handkerchief were the circumstances which moved the coroner's jury to return the verdict containing the word "apparent," indicating some degree of uncertainty.

Some of Brundage's friends, in expressing doubt that he committed suicide because of financial straits, said he paid $200,000 for his Dixon farm and that there was only a $2,500 mortgage on it.

Nevertheless, there was a letter in the coat pocket of Mr. Brundage from the Chicago Title and Trust company stating that unless a mortgage payment was made foreclosure proceedings against his Lake Forest home would be started.

THIEVES STEAL HIDDEN $2,800 SAVINGS OF PAIR

For years Nicholas Hook saved all he could from his earnings as a coal miner at Truckee, in Franklin county. When he and his wife came to Chicago to operate a rooming house at 1182 Milwaukee avenue they put $2,800 in large bills under a paper pasted over the back of a picture. Yesterday thieves broke in, tore off the paper, and made off with the money.

CUTTER RUSHES TO RESCUE OF ISLAND'S CATTLE

Grand Haven, Mich., Jan. 21.—(P)—Loaded with 100 tons of hay for the cattle on Icebound Beaver island in northern Lake Michigan, the coast guard cutter Escanaba put out from here today.

The cutter, dispatched by H. R. Searles, of Chicago, divisional commander of the coast guard, expected to reach Charlevoix tonight. Charlevoix is approximately 30 miles from the island.

The coast guards planned to maneuver the cutter to the edge of the ice pack which surrounds the island. At that point the islanders will meet the vessel and transfer the cargo to the sleds and haul it to the shore.

CUTS RFC FUNDS FROM TREASURY TO 500 MILLION

President Sees Normalcy by June, 1935.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—While administration leaders prepared to push through the senate this week the President's bill to establish a new monetary system and to devalue the dollar, Mr. Roosevelt emphasized in a new move his conviction that recovery outlays can be terminated by June 30, 1935.

In announcing his approval of the bill extending the life of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for another year the President enjoined Chairman Jesse Jones of the corporation not to withdraw more than $60 million dollars from the treasury in the next fiscal year except with prior presidential approval.

This order is in line with the program laid down in the President's budget message which is based on the assumption that the depression will be ended by June 30, 1935; that further recovery expenditures by that time will not be necessary, and that with a public debt aggregating $2 billion the government can then begin balancing the budget and reducing the debt.

Returned Funds Available.

In his budget message the President estimated that additional emergency expenditures for the RFC and other recovery institutions in the 1935 fiscal year can be kept within 2 billion. He calculated there would be a 2 billion deficit next year on top of the 7 billion deficit this year.

"It is my understanding," said the President in his letter to Chairman Jones, "that the bill does not confine the total lending authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the sum of $50 million dollars specified therein, but the extension of the life of the corporation automatically makes available to it the amount of any repayments received during the period of such extension and that you may make commitments and expenditures under the indefinite provision of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation act."

"It is noted that the bill does not confine the payments on account of commitments and agreements entered into by the corporation to the period ending Feb. 1, 1935, but provides for payments over a period of one year after the date of such commitments and agreements."

Sees Operations on Repayments.

"In order to confine all additional expenditures required to be made in 1935 which were not expressly provided for in the budget to the amount indicated in my budget message, I find it necessary to advise you that my approval of this bill is given with the distinct understanding that the cash withdrawals from the treasury by the corporation for the fiscal year 1935, including any debentures issued for the purchase of preferred stock and capital stock of banks, and exclusive of the funds which you may be called upon to allocate to other agencies of the government as provided by law, will not, without my prior approval, exceed the sum of $60 million dollars, and no commitments or agreements shall be made so that expenditures may be made thereon after June 30, 1935."

"Your estimates of repayments for the fiscal year 1935 indicate that this total authorized expenditure of $60 million dollars may be made out of the funds of the corporation."

The senate tomorrow will receive the dollar devaluation bill passed overwhelmingly by the house yesterday, and will refer it to its banking and currency committee. The committee will conclude by tomorrow night the public hearing on the bill, which will be distinguished by the appearance of Prof. George F. Warren, author of the President's dollar depreciation and gold purchase program.

Expect Fight in Senate.

For the first time an opportunity will be afforded to draw from Prof. Warren an explanation of the theory of commodity price regulation by manipulation of the currency.

On Tuesday the committee will begin consideration of the bill. Democratic Senators Carter Glass (Va.), Thomas P. Gore (Okla.), and William G. McAdoo (Cal.) will offer vigorous opposition to the proposed seizure of the Federal Reserve Bank gold, the grant of unlimited financial power to the secretary of the treasury and several other features of the measure, but their resistance will avail naught unless they receive the virtually solid support of the Republican minority.

The prospect is that the committee will report the bill without material change but that Senator Glass will write a minority report on which he will fight the measure on the senate floor. The fun is going to fly in the debate but the administration expects to be able to drive the bill to passage by the end of the week.

Vanderlip's Control Plan.

It transpired during the day that the committee for the nation whose dollar depreciation and gold purchase scheme the President adopted has broken with Mr. Roosevelt on one feature of the monetary bill. It is against the concentration of vast

YOUNG ASTOR'S ENGAGEMENT OFF

Miss Eileen S. Gillespie and John Jacob Astor III, whose engagement, first announced on Dec. 16, was canceled last night by announcement of the girl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence L. Gillespie of New York and Newport. The wedding was to have taken place on Feb. 6.

No Wedding Bells

New York, Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Lewis Gillespie of this city and Newport, R. I., have announced that the engagement of their daughter, Miss Eileen S. Gillespie, to John Jacob Astor, has been canceled. No reason for the termination of the engagement was given.

The wedding had been planned for the afternoon of Feb. 6 at St. Thomas church. Bridal attendants and ushers had been chosen by Miss Gillespie and Mr. Astor, although invitations to the marriage had not been sent out. The engagement was announced by Mr. and Mrs. Gillespie on Dec. 16.

Miss Gillespie is a granddaughter of Mrs. Watts Sherman and the late Mr. Sherman and of the late Maj. Gen. George Lewis Gillespie, U.S.A., who served on Gen. Sherman's staff in the civil war.

Mr. Astor is the son of the late Col. John Jacob Astor, who lost his life in the Titanic disaster, and of the present Mrs. Enzo Fiermonte. He is a direct descendant of the original John Jacob Astor.

monetary authority in the hands of the secretary of the treasury.

Every senator and congressman received from the committee today a copy of a bill drafted by Frank A. Vanderlip, former banker and former assistant secretary of the treasury, which proposes the creation of a federal monetary authority, with the major powers of a central bank. In a covering letter the committee said:

"The pending gold bill concentrates monetary authority in the hands of the secretary of the treasury. Such concentration raises serious doubts in the minds of many, as it combines the functions of currency issue in the same hands that also borrow for and meet government expenditures."

"The draft bill attached hereto creates a federal monetary authority, coordinate but entirely independent of the treasury, responsible to the congress, but free from political control. In such an institution the best monetary knowledge of the country could be centered and a body of experience developed, such as is possessed by the central banks which serve other nations."

GUNMEN KIDNAP STORE MANAGER; GET $1,000 IN CASH

Emil Ratajki, 34 years old, 10011 South Carpenter street, manager of the Liggett drug store at 149 North Clark street, was about to mount the stairway of the rapid transit lines at Clark and Lake streets early today when three gunmen stopped him.

"You're going back to the store and open the safe," announced one of the robbers.

With a hand on each side of him and one in back Ratajki was marched to the store. They passed a policeman and numerous pedestrians, but none suspected Ratajki's plight. The robbers kept their guns concealed. Inside the store the manager was compelled, on threats of death, to open the safe. The robbers emptied it of $1,000 and then escaped.

DUTCH SHIP SINKS IN PANAMA CANAL LAKE; SAVE CREW

COLON, C. Z., Jan. 21.—[AP.]—The Royal Netherlands freighter Brion sank today in Gatun lake, half a mile south of the lock, the first vessel ever to founder in Canal Zone waters.

Capt. W. H. Robling and a crew of 22 were rescued by Panama canal launches.

The foundering followed upon unsuccessful attempts to beach the vessel after she had developed a dangerous list. With her bows touching the bank she listed further to port and gradually submerged at 4:30 p. m. The sinking was believed to have been due to a leak which caused flooding of the hold, although this was not definitely determined.

LET CONGRESS CONTROL GOLD, COUGHLIN SAYS

Backs Remonetization of Silver.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 21.—[AP.]—The Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit priest, today advocated amendment of the Roosevelt gold measure to permit congress to retain control over the monetary system rather than to bestow that authority upon the secretary of the treasury.

"There is no fear of the integrity of President Roosevelt or Secretary Morgenthau," Father Coughlin declared, asserting that congress alone has the constitutional right to control the American monetary system.

"America is in no mood to transfer the control of the dollar," he continued, "to a one-man dictator not elected by the people."

Would Modify Program.

Besides proposing this modification of the administration measure which was approved last night by the house, Father Coughlin asked:

"Why not include remonetization of silver to avoid printing press money?"

Otherwise he voiced approval of the President's monetary program.

Charging that "international bankers" want the dollar stabilized at 60 cents instead of 44 cents, which, the speaker asserted, is the proper level, he said:

"There must be no stabilization unfair to the people of the United States. The people's voice in this is their congressmen and senators. The priest then urged his auditors to communicate their views to them and with dispatch."

Accused of "Welching."

Father Coughlin traced what he said was the United States' financing of the allied powers, especially Great Britain and France, in the world war and accused them of "welching" on their war debts.

"Great Britain wanted our dough more than our doughboys," he said in reference to American loans to the allies, adding that now she still "is proceeding to acquire our dough."

"The year 1776 brought political independence to the United States," he said, "and 1934 must bring financial independence."

Civilization has depended upon "bankers' money" up to the present time, he said, and contended that it was the control of money by a few that led to hunger and want.

"A bottleneck of gold," he asserted, "stopped distribution of the blessings to men."

Returns to Roosevelt Theme.

Returning to his theme of "Roosevelt or Ruin," the speaker said that "no country ever existed half prosperous and half impoverished."

FATHER GETS SON BACK AFTER FLIGHT IN THREE COUNTRIES

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—A flight touching three countries ended today with a father the victor in winning back his son after matching wits with foreign police.

The father is George Evan Jr., a teacher in South Hills High school. Fourteen months ago, his French wife, whom he married in Paris in world war days, took her son, now 13 years old, to her own country.

Mr. Evan sailed for Paris in December. He went to the street corner in Boulogne where he knew George Jean waited for a street car to take him to school in Paris. There he met his boy.

The boy agreed to accompany his father to America. That night they crossed the border into Belgium, first, however, telephoning to Mrs. Evan that the child was safe, and requesting her to meet him at Brussels for a reconciliation talk.

When Mrs. Evan arrived she was accompanied by a Paris police inspector. But Belgian police refused to arrest him.

The flight turned toward England the next morning. Father and son boarded a steamer, which went to Cherbourg. At this French port the police, acting on telegraphic communication from Paris, tried to have the father taken back to Paris with the boy. But the captain of the Europa backed the father, and an hour later the liner steamed out, father and son safely en route home.

administration to avoid foreign entanglements, Father Coughlin declared that "Almost 90 per cent of our monetary troubles are domestic."

"If we adjust our local finances to benefit ourselves, our foreign finances will solve themselves," he added.

PASTORS ATTACK COLLEGE COURSE IN SEX RELATIONS

Warn of Study's Unsound Moral Aspect.

Two prominent Chicago pastors in their sermons yesterday attacked the growing emphasis which is being placed on sex in college courses. Such courses, it is charged, are being offered to students in the guise of social studies in which the moral aspects of sex relationships are ignored or flouted, with resultant demoralization of college youths and girls.

The Rev. Dr. Frederick Shannon, pastor of Central church in Orchestra, pointed out in his sermon the sharp distinction between the proper teaching of sex relationship as a social study and a proper teaching of the facts of sex as a biological study.

Courses Called Disgrace.

"I consider it a shame and a disgrace that universities should require students to take sex courses," said Dr. Shannon.

As a specific example of such a required sex course he referred to a study required of all sophomores in Columbia university in New York. This study was called a "course in coeducation" by the Rev. John F. O'Hara, president of the University of Notre Dame, in an address before alumni in Boston Saturday.

The trend toward a "coeducation" course in universities arousing widespread condemnation as an acute danger to the moral standards of the educated youth of the country. It is charged that such courses teach that sex relationships outside of wedlock are of no moral consequence. Wedlock itself purports to be highly regarded by the university sponsors of the new social philosophy, but wedlock is treated along with casual sex relationships both being considered as normal phases of sex life.

"Involves Root of Morality."

Dr. Shannon mentioned reports from various women's colleges that further courses on the subject of sex expression were being considered.

"The people who endorse these universities and colleges should have something to say in a matter involving the very root of morality in the home, civic, and church life of the nation," he said. "Science, through the channels of biology and zoology, for example, provides adequate information in regard to sex. We should not tolerate such laxity that regards sex expression as a romantic aesthetic aspect of life. It is essentially a matter of morals."

The dangers to students of an unbalanced outlook regarding sex relations as discussed in such courses were described by Dr. John Thompson, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, Chicago Temple, yesterday. In a brief statement prior to his sermon, Dr. Thompson expressed his suspicion that the centers of American culture and education would even consider a step in the direction of the Columbia course.

"Exceedingly Dangerous."

"The air is charged with new life and ideas," he said. "Unquestionably

100,000 POUNDS OF CORNFED FISH SWIM TO MART FROM IOWA

McGregor, Ia., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—One hundred thousand pounds of live cornfed carp are being shipped to New York by the Delphy Brothers, commercial fishermen, in specially built swim-to-market fish cars.

The carp were raised from the Mississippi river near here last summer and put in ponds and fed corn. Carp from the mud wallows at the bottom of the river, say the Delphys, poached in ponds of running cold spring water and fed on corn, change from a coarse, soft fish, to one with firm white flesh that many can't tell from a pike.

all cultured people read with shock the article dealing with the course in sex relations at Columbia university, which the Rev. O'Hara called a "course in coeducation." While we are in a "new day," yet all reasonable people, no matter how broad-minded, must admit that such a course is exceedingly dangerous and educationally questionable."

Next Sunday evening Dr. Thompson proposes to explain his position in this matter more fully, in connection with a discussion of the effects of the proposed merger of Northwestern university and the University of Chicago, on the cultural life of Chicago.

OPEN NEW FIGHT FOR UNIFIED AIR SERVICE IN U. S.

Struggle in Congress Is Believed Certain.

yearly are admitted to the Leavenworth Army school, and only seven yearly to the War college in Washington.

The contention is made that once an airman is well trained he should be schooled in all the other military arts, and that anyway, he should not spend all his time flying, but should be transferred at times to the other branches of the service.

Argue for Special Corps.

In the arguments for a combined air force, it is contended by the army general staff that both the army and the navy, and the marine corps, too, have specialized and cooperative uses for air corps which are peculiarly necessary integral parts of each service.

Replying to this, the proponents of a centralized control have argued that the work of planning and training air corps for army, navy, or marine work could be carried out under a single air head with much greater efficiency, economy and effectiveness. At the same time, they add, it would be possible to train all American air fighters in all branches of air combat so that if war came, and certain types of air fighters were needed in greater abundance than others, they would be available immediately.

The army and navy experts claim an officer has time to learn only one line of service, but congressional observers, with many years of service on military affairs and naval committees, have branded this lament as rubbish.

One congressman asserts that if officers did not spend so much of their time at tea parties and cocktail bouts they would be able with ease to master the technique of the other arms of military service.

Call MacArthur Vague.

An inspection of Gen. MacArthur's latest annual report, in which he accuses the state of the army, has led to a charge from congressional observers that he is vague and uncertain in his dissertation on air tactics and organization.

Finding himself on comfortable ground in writing about the infantry, cavalry and artillery, the general reflects assurance in predicting future developments in these arms.

"But the airplane is a comparatively new development," Gen. MacArthur writes, "and one that had no prototype among the weapons of the past. There is, of course, no question as to the tremendous influence the airplane will exert upon warfare of the future, but there is as yet only meager experience upon which to base, with any confidence in their accuracy, predictions as to the extent of that influence or the manner in which it will be most effectively utilized."

"But, though, in the realm of actual experience there are few sign posts to indicate the channels into which our efforts in air development should now be directed, in the field of practical preparedness the situation is considerably less obscure."

"Relative standards must be observed rather than absolute ones. In quality our personnel and equipment must be equal to the best in the world; in quantity prudence demands that we maintain those amounts that would, under any circumstances, permit combat under reasonably favorable terms."

U. S. "Less Vulnerable."

Holding that the vulnerability of the United States is much less than that of a country having a powerful enemy at its borders, Gen. MacArthur believes that the nation's general situation "minimizes, and under present conditions almost eliminates, the possibility of unsupported air attacks of any great size being launched against the United States." He goes on to write the following statement which advocates of a separate air force hold against the general's ability to judge the subject adequately:

"No major battle in or near the United States in which land or sea forces will not constitute the ultimately

TRY OUT LOW PRICED PLANE

The Arup plane, built in Indiana at the request of the federal government for a low priced commercial plane, is shown skimming over the capital in Washington.

'The Flying Wing'

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Department of commerce aeronautics officials have interested themselves in a new type airplane, a "flying wing" said to rival, if not surpass, the bird in design.

Demonstrated recently over the capital in the presence of aeronautics officials, the new Arup plane, eliminates some of the protruberances of the average ship.

The plane was designed by Dr. C. L. Snyder of South Bend, Ind. Some of the special features claimed for it are a landing speed one-half that of the conventional airplane and ability to take off in a small area.

The present model attains a top speed of 97 miles an hour and has a landing speed of 23 miles. It is powered by a 35 horsepower engine.

decisive element can yet be classed as a strong possibility."

The general does concede that "efficiency of air support for our land or sea forces in such a battle might well be the determining factor in victory or defeat," and he sets this claim up to bolster his opinion that the army and navy should continue in supervision over their own air corps.

France's Force Double U. S. Comparing the relative forces of France and the United States, Gen. MacArthur finds that France's land army has 18 men to America's one. From this he draws comfort in the fact that France's air force is only twice as great as that of the United States.

Declaring the army corps is relatively the best prepared of any branch, adequate to guard the nation during the early months of a war, the general adds that "manifestly it would be nothing less than folly to accentuate too far the disparity in the state of readiness between air and ground arms."

Gen. MacArthur has contended that the army and navy air corps already cooperate adequately with each other through the joint aeronautical board, which holds regular meetings for the purpose of considering policies and various developments in research which are of common value. To confute this statement, there is a story about Washington that the naval aviation research experts are so jealous of their discoveries that they will not even confide them to their own secretary.

WEST PK. BOARD TO REFUND DEBT WITH NEW BONDS

Savings Cited.

The west park board will embark this week on a $19,650,000 refunding bond program to clean up the staggering obligations left behind by the former administration. Edward N. Heinz, controller for the board and author of the plan, declared that it would avert the danger of bond defaults in the future and effect the complete financial rehabilitation of the west park district.

The Heinz plan is based on enabling measures passed by the Illinois legislature last June. The legislation gives the park board authority to issue $19,650,000 worth of 20 year refunding bonds and provides for the sale for cash of $2,000,000 worth of 10 year working cash fund bonds.

Method of Application. The refunding bonds will be applied as follows: $12,450,000 exchanged on a par-for-par and coupon-for-coupon basis for outstanding bonds and accrued interest; $5,900,000 for funding accrued interest, back pay, vendors' claims, inter-fund borrowings and income due the employees' pension fund; and $1,300,000 to retire 1929 tax anticipation warrants.

"We are confident of success," Heinz asserted yesterday. "Several large holders of our bonds have already declared themselves eager to take the refunding bonds in exchange for the bonds they now hold."

A. C. Allen & Co., investment house at 100 West Monroe street, will act as financial agent for the park commissioners in carrying out the program. The contract with the board provides that when 90 per cent of the refunding bonds have been distributed the investment concern will then purchase the $2,000,000 worth of working cash fund bonds.

See No Tax Increase. Heinz pointed out that when the plan is accomplished the board will have, outside the $21,550,000 of bonds, only $900,000 worth of 1932 tax anticipation warrants. He declared that no increase in taxes would result from the program and further that by bringing interest and sinking fund requirements within the reasonable limits of tax collections a greater security was provided for bondholders.

During the last four years the bond and interest levy of the park districts averaged $1,600,000, of which 70 per cent, or $1,120,000, has been collected in each year, as compared with interest requirements under the new plan of only $840,000.

The present park board, headed by Harry Joseph, took office on Jan. 30 of last year and the administration thus far has made economy its watchword. In the fiscal year ending Feb. 28, 1934, the park pay roll under the old board, of which W. R. James was president, amounted to $2,259,851, whereas in the year to end Feb. 28, 1934, the pay roll will not exceed $1,400,000, according to Heinz.

Board Expenses Cut. The total expenses of the board, exclusive of depreciation, but including salaries, will have been reduced from $2,925,000 in the last year of the old board's regime to a figure not exceeding $1,450,000 for this fiscal year, between February and December, 1933, the new board retired all 1931 warrants amounting to $1,350,000 plus interest and by mid-year all 1930 warrants had been redeemed.

In February of last year the park system had an indebtedness of approximately $22,500,000, including about two years of back salaries, but had available only about $2,500 in cash. These obligations have now been reduced to $19,650,000, the amount for which the refunding bonds are to be issued.

Reserve Bank Chief Here After Visit to Grayson

George L. Harrison, governor of the New York Federal Reserve bank, passed through Chicago last night en route to Washington. He spent the last week at the bedside of his friend, Admiral Cary T. Grayson, former personal physician to the late Presidents Theodore Roosevelt, Taft and Wilson. Admiral Grayson recently underwent an operation at the Mayo clinic, Rochester, Minn. The admiral's condition is reported improved. Gov. Harrison arrived here over the Northwestern railroad at 7 o'clock and left an hour later over the Baltimore & Ohio railroad.

JAP WAR CHIEF RESIGNS; SEEN AS U. S. PEACE GAIN

Sadao Araki Quits on Eve of Diet Session.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
TOKIO, Jan. 22.—(Monday).—Lieut. Gen. Sadao Araki, minister of war in the Japanese cabinet since December, 1931, and one of the most important leaders of Japan's military clique, resigned today.

His health following an attack of pneumonia was given as the reason, but the resignation, coming only a day before the opening of the Japanese diet, was regarded by observers as freighted with political significance.

Gen. Araki, in handling the Manchurian situation, repeatedly and plainly warned the United States and Russia, as well as the league of nations, to keep their hands off. He has often stressed the military aspects of Japanese policy in magazine articles and addresses.

Split Loomed in October.
Opposition to Araki and the military clique first became pronounced in Japan when Koki Hirota was made foreign minister last October. Hirota indicated he would endeavor to effect more harmonious relations with the United States. Araki in an interview declared that "if people believe the foreign policy toward the United States will change, they are absolutely wrong."

At the time this pronouncement was regarded as foreboding a split in the cabinet, with the military members pitted against the more liberal and less warlike ministers headed by Hirota.

Political observers today looked on Araki's resignation, therefore, as indicating that the military faction is slipping and that improved relations with both America and Russia will result. Hirota, incidentally, is expected to affirm a conviction that Japanese-American relations are improving in his speech to the diet tomorrow.

Emperor to Accept.
The resignation, which will be submitted to the emperor, would undoubtedly be rejected at any time but now, it is believed. With the diet, however, immediately taking up the enormous military budget, its members would not be satisfied with answers by acting ministers. Consequently, much as the emperor desires to keep Araki, it is regarded as certain that the resignation will be accepted.

Navy leaders have recently been flooding the newspapers and magazines of the country with "war scare" articles in a desperate attempt to convince the public that passage of the record army and navy budget is necessary to the nation's security.

Gen. Senjuro Hayashi, inspector general of military education, is reported to be slated to succeed Araki.

Urges Peace with Russia.
The foreign office today directed a statement at soviet Russian leaders declaring that Japan has been following a peaceful policy and does not understand why irresponsible statements should be made by responsible soviet officers clamoring for war between the two nations. The communists pointed out that the soviets have massed troops at the Manchukuo border and have even erected barbed wire entanglements.

Police yesterday suppressed a hostile demonstration by members of a patriotic society in front of the soviet embassy. The demonstrators had previously adopted a resolution demanding that Russian troops be retired from the border of Manchukuo.

3 SHOT DEAD AND ONE WOUNDED IN KENTUCKY FIGHTS

Harlan, Ky., Jan. 21.—(P)—Constable John Pace, 49, and Manzo Surgen, 35, a miner and deputy sheriff, were shot to death today at Crumrine, near here, as the outcome of another shooting affray last night.

Milford Napier and Lee Harding surrendered to officers and were charged with the slaying of Pace. Napier and Harding told officers Pace fired into a restaurant owned by Napier last night and they followed him to arrest him. Surgen approached Pace today and Pace shot Surgen three times.

When Pace attempted to leave the scene he was shot.

Abner Howard, 36, a miner, was in Harlan hospital today with a serious wound in the abdomen. Officers were told Howard was shot last night as he stood with a group of men near Evans.

Shot Dead in Fight.
Stearns, Ky., Jan. 21.—(P)—Walter Ross, 22, of Otter Creek, was shot and killed last night after an altercation near Otter Creek schoolhouse. Hubert Daugherty, 20, surrendered to the Rev. Sam Strunk, who was preaching in the schoolhouse at the time.

BRITAIN APPOINTS BOARD TO GOVERN NEWFOUNDLAND

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
LONDON, Jan. 21.—Members of the royal commission, which will set up a colonial form of government in Newfoundland, were announced tonight. The commission will supersede the dominion administration and seek to rehabilitate the finances of the island. It consists of six members under the presidency of Admiral Sir David Murray Anderson, governor and commander in chief of Newfoundland since 1932.

The administration of Newfoundland will be placed under the general supervision of the mother country until the island again becomes self-supporting.

PICK JURY TODAY TO HEAR CASE OF MRS. BLACKLIDGE

Policeman's Wife Seeks $100,000 Balm.

A jury is to be chosen today to determine the cash value of the love of a police patrol wagon driver. The case is an allegation of affections suit brought by Mrs. Susanne Nottingham, 6468 Vernon avenue, against Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blackledge, former collector of internal revenue. The suit will be tried before Judge Irving L. Weaver of Sterling, who is sitting in Superior court here.

Mrs. Nottingham is asking $100,000 for the love of her husband, Norman E. Nottingham, known in the Grand Crossing police station and to Mrs. Blackledge, according to his wife's attorney, as "Denny." Mrs. Blackledge, through her attorney, Eugene P. Megan, will maintain $100,000 is too much, considering the station of Nottingham, even if the allegations of the wife were true.

Early Rounds of Battle.
The wife brought her suit Sept. 21, 1932, through Attorney Murphy O. Tate. She alleged she had "wholly lost and been deprived of the society, comfort and support of her husband," by the actions of Mrs. Blackledge. Mrs. Blackledge was charged with having stolen the love of Policeman Nottingham in 1921 and caused estrangement of the husband and wife about May 16, 1932.

Attorney Tate expects to present evidence that the policeman met Mrs. Blackledge when he arrested her on complaint of neighbors that her parties disturbed the peace in August of 1931. Mrs. Blackledge was acquitted in court. The attorney will endeavor to show this acquaintance ripening into love.

Two preliminary rounds of the legal battle have already been waged before Judge Weaver. In one Mrs. Nottingham obtained an admission from Mrs. Blackledge that four ardent love letters, addressed to "Denny," were written by her. Mrs. Blackledge refused, however, to say whether or not the letters were written to Nottingham.

Still with Husband.
In the second round Mrs. Blackledge presented an interrogatory of 22 questions to the wife concerning the home life of the policeman. Upon these the defense expects to base its case. The defense will maintain Mrs. Nottingham has not lost the love of Once or twice victims have caught glimpses of a man fleeing in the night and twice an automobile has been seen speeding away. Several times a woman's footprints have been found.

One doctor who has treated several victims says at least on one occasion chlorine gas was used. The gas attacks began on the night of Dec. 23 and have averaged two or three a week.

MESSRS. BAILEY AND BATES LEARN FEEDING TRICK

Hunger Strikers Given Milk Via Nose.

Leavenworth, Kas., Jan. 21.—(P)—Harvey Bailey and Albert Bates, ex-members of that school of machine gunners which holds the fruit jar full of moonshine liquor to be standard equipment, struggled in vain at the federal penitentiary today to carry on a hunger strike in the face of forcible feeding of milk.

"Death or freedom from solitary," is the announced purpose of the desperadoes' refusal to eat.

But prison authorities have other plans for them. For one thing, about $100,000 of the $200,000 paid for the release of Charles F. Urschel, Oklahoma City oil man, whom they were convicted of kidnapping, has never been recovered. Department of justice authorities believe they know its whereabouts.

To Alcatraz Later.

For another, the two life terms and George Kelly, who was convicted with them, are scheduled to be sent later to the federal government's new prison for the more desperate convicts on Alcatraz island and it is proposed to deliver them in good shape.

Both Bailey and Bates, under violent protest, are being fed almost a gallon of milk daily.

Every four or five hours the prison physician, two guards, and two convict witnesses—the latter to forestall possible charges of the prisoners that they are abused—visit the cells.

The guards hold down the patient. The physician inserts a rubber hose with two outlets into his nostrils and pours down a pint of milk. There is some bad language.

Put Up Battle.

"We tried at first to be nice to them and insert the hose through the mouth," a guard explained, "but they soon learned they could shut off the milk by clamping down the teeth."

Apparently the "grapevine" carried the news to Bailey after Bates went on his hunger strike Jan. 7. Bailey, who is cut off by prison regulations from all contact with his friends, ceased eating Jan. 15.

Forcible feeding of Bates was begun Jan. 19. Then Bailey also was put under the treatment. Physicians said the latter was in better condition than Bates because he continued the drinking of water.

ASK GRAND JURY QUIZ ON FLOOD AT LOS ANGELES

Los Angeles, Jan. 21.—(P)—Grand jury investigation of the New Year's eve flood in the La Crescenta-Montrose district, which took more than 40 lives and destroyed hundreds of houses in this and other parts of the Los Angeles area, was asked at a mass meeting of some 500 persons today.

A resolution was offered by State Assemblyman James O'Connor and unanimously adopted, saying it was impossible for waters to follow established channels "due to conditions apparently contributed to by a series of mistakes of judgment, causing a diversion of said flood waters from their established channels, thereby causing loss of many lives, the wiping out of several hundred homes and causing untold suffering."

Petitions seeking the removal of E. C. Eaton, chief engineer of the Los Angeles county flood control district, were circulated.

M. A. Traylor Continues His Steady Improvement

Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National bank, who is confined to his Barry avenue home suffering from pneumonia, was reported "steadily improving" yesterday. His physicians said the improvement has been marked since Friday, when his condition was worst. According to the doctors, the lung congestion has loosened and his temperature has approached normal.

INCREASE FACTOR GUARDS AS TRIAL IS PUT OFF A DAY

Lack of Veniemen Delays Jury Completion.

Extra precautions were taken yesterday to guard John Factor, wealthy speculator, in the expectation that a jury will be completed tomorrow to try four Touhy gangsters for his kidnapping. There will be no session of the court today due to the lack of veniemen. Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert C. Crowley said additional guards had been assigned to protect Factor, whose testimony is needed in the trial in which the state is seeking death penalties.

The defendants are Roger Touhy, leader of the gang; Edward "Father Tom" McFadden, Albert "Polly Noose" Kator, and Gustav "Gloomy Gus" Schaefer. Eight men have been selected to serve on the jury and for a time Saturday it appeared that the additional four jurors might quickly be accepted by both sides.

Causes Delay Intentionally.

But Attorney William Scott Stewart, counsel for the gangsters, used a score or more peremptory challenges in dismissing men from the panel. He admitted he did so deliberately in order to put off completion of the jury until this week. The venire was not sufficient and as an additional fifty men could not be summoned over Sunday, it was necessary to delay the trial until tomorrow.

"The state seemed too anxious to get the jury Saturday," said Attorney Stewart in explaining his courtroom strategy.

Hopes of Defendants.

Prosecutor Crowley saw in this defense move, however, only the hope of the defendants that something might happen to Factor before he takes the witness stand to identify them. Factor is under the necessity of going back to England to stand trial on charges of a $7,000,000 swindle, but he has not yet been taken into federal custody. He is being guarded by the state and after the trial will be surrendered to federal authorities.

Judge Michael Feinberg, presiding at the Touhy trial, ordered speed in the calling of jurors and declared he will tolerate no more delay. If the four needed jurors are not quickly obtained he will hold night sessions, he told the attorneys.

Fishing Schooner Loses 2 of Crew in Heavy Storm

LIVERPOOL, Nova Scotia, Jan. 21.—(P)—The Lunenburg fishing schooner Bruce Winowa reached port Saturday night reporting the loss of two of her crew. The seamen strayed from the vessel while tending trawls in a heavy snowstorm, the vessel reported, 13 miles off the coast.

HACKETT KIDNAP CASE WILL REACH JURY LATE TODAY

Swolley Alibi 'Fraud', Prosecutor Says.

The case of Gall Swolley and Frank Souder, charged with the kidnapping for ransom of James J. Hackett, Blue Island gambler, is expected to reach the jury in Judge Thomas J. Lynch's court this afternoon. Final arguments, for which a total of five hours will be allowed, are to be started at the opening of court. Prosecutor Mal Coghlan expressed confidence that a verdict would be returned by evening.

The case would have gone to the jury Saturday, but a legal dispute over an alibi offered by Swolley caused a delay and Judge Lynch ordered the jury locked up for the week-end.

Odd Claim by Defendant.

Swolley claimed he was in the office of one of his attorneys, T. J. McCormick, on May 27, 1933, when Hackett was abducted. Prosecutor Coghlan asked that the court call McCormick as its own witness, so he could be cross-examined, but this request was denied and McCormick was not placed on the stand by the defense.

Mr. Coghlan said his confidence in a verdict of guilty was not shaken by the Swolley alibi, which he will label a fraud in his demand that the defendants be condemned to the electric chair. Three other persons—Hackett, a friend of his, Frank Carney, and a co-defendant, Julius Augustus (Babe) Jones, who turned state's evidence, have positively identified Swolley as one of the kidnapers.

Calls Alibi a Fraud.

"With such evidence against Swolley, I am confident that the jury will believe, as we do, that his alibi was a flagrant fraud upon the court," said Mr. Coghlan.

The kidnap trial has created interest because, for the first time in Chicago, it has presented the situation of a gangster turning state's evidence.

Sidney Fox and Husband Make Up After Quarrel

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 21.—(P)—Sidney Fox and her husband, Charles Beahan, who separated during a quarrel at a New Year's party, have talked things over, they said today, and decided to abandon all plans for a divorce for the present. "In spite of our recent difficulties," said Miss Fox, film actress, "our marriage has meant too much to both of us to end it without serious consideration. We have determined to take time to think things out."

CONFEREES BEGIN LIQUOR CONTROL DRAFTING TODAY

Must Settle Dispute on Advertising Signs.

The legislature will resume consideration of the state liquor control bill at Springfield today. Indications are that the measure will be called for passage tomorrow.

A number of differences must be ironed out first, and these will be discussed by a conference committee of the senate and the house at 4 o'clock this afternoon. The committee members expressed hope last night that the final drafts of the bill may be printed and placed on the members' desks by tomorrow.

Saloon Signs Are Issue.

One of the principal differences in the bill to be considered by the conference committee this afternoon deals with the question of whether beverage manufacturers shall be prohibited from furnishing advertising signs to saloons.

According to Wilton A. Simpson, a member of the Chicago Electric association, comprised of sign manufacturers, such a prohibition, if adopted, will throw 2,000 men out of work in Chicago, and nullify at least $250,000 worth of sign contracts.

Blames Small Breweries.

Mr. Simpson said most of the 40 sign companies in Chicago are now working overtime to meet the demand of the brewers. One company alone, he declared, has $60,000 in contracts for signs. All these companies, Mr. Simpson added, employ painters, glass blowers, electricians, sign erectors, and other skilled workers. He charged that some of the smaller breweries, with political support, are backing the advertising sign prohibition because they can't afford to furnish signs themselves.

GIRL PRETENDS HER OWN BABY IS A FOUNDLING

Police Upset Plan of Young Mother.

An 18 year old mother's plan to adopt her own infant daughter as a foundling was thwarted by the police yesterday. The mother, Mrs. Mary Klobner, 1907 Lowell avenue, tramped the streets all Saturday night with the baby, Mary Jane, 10 months old, in her arms after a quarrel with her husband. In the morning she halted a taxiab driver in Grant park at Monroe street.

"I've just found an abandoned baby," she cried excitedly. "Hurry to a hospital." The driver started for St. Luke's hospital, stopping on the way to pick up a south park policeman. After the baby was left at the hospital Mrs. Klobner was taken to the Central police station to make a statement.

Tells of Finding Baby.

Sergeant Sojat questioned Mrs. Klobner. She said she had been looking for a job and found the baby lying on the ground when she went into Grant park to rest.

Sergeant Sojat ordered the young woman to direct him to a restaurant where she said she had applied for work. She protested that she had forgotten the address. On further questioning she broke down.

"I've been having trouble with my husband, Joseph," she said. "On Saturday he told me to get out and leave the baby."

"I went, but sneaked back and got Mary Jane. I decided to get a job. I walked and walked. Once in awhile I would find a bench and sit down. I only had a few cents. I spent that during Saturday night for some milk which I had a druggist heat in his store for baby."

Police Spoil It.

"I decided then to make people believe I found the baby in Grant park. I knew it would get care, and nobody else could claim it. In a couple of weeks, when I had a job, I would adopt Mary Jane. But you spoiled it."

At the hospital it was found that the baby was suffering from exposure but her condition was not serious. When the mother first told her story of finding the child in the park the police thought it might have been a victim of kidnapers, because it was well cared for and well dressed. Mrs. Klobner expressed love for the baby. She said, however, that on no

POLICE NAB FUGITIVE KANSAS CONVICT AS HE ENTERS MISSOURI

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 21.—(P)—Charles Clifford McArthur, 29 years old, one of seven convicts who escaped over a wall of the Kansas penitentiary at Lansing Friday, was captured by city detectives here today while officers continued their search throughout Kansas and Oklahoma for the other fugitives.

McArthur, his right leg swollen from fractures of an ankle bone suffered in jumping from the wall, descended from a street car that brought him from Kansas City, Kan. He was recognized by the detectives from prison photographs. He still wore his blue denim uniform.

Police said McArthur, who has a record as a murderer and robber in Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas, had walked the 35 miles to Kansas City seeking a sanctuary where he could receive medical attention for his leg. Jim Clark and Frank Delmar disappeared near Pawhuska, Okla., yesterday after releasing Louis Dresser, 26 year old rural school teacher whom they kidnaped from his home near Wolcott, Kas., for a wild flight in his motor car.

Dresser returned home last night, apparently none the worse for his 1,100 mile detour.

WARM WEATHER LURES DRIVERS; TRAFFIC HEAVY

Parks and Golf Courses
Also Crowded.

Unusually warm weather for January prevailed in Chicago yesterday, and thousands of motorists were lured out for drives. All highways carried heavy traffic, and many were jammed with long lines of motor cars. City and county police said the traffic was the heaviest in months.

The parks and golf courses also were crowded. A total of 319 played golf at Olympia Fields, giving the courses, No. 2 and No. 4, a midsummer appearance.

The temperature reached a maximum of 55 degrees at 1:50 p. m. A clear sky and balmy, springlike breezes made the day more enjoyable. The temperature was a maximum for this month. The maximum for January, 1932, was 57 degrees, reached on the 19th.

Rain Possibility Today.

The forecast for today calls for more mild weather, but with the probability of rain. Parts of Minnesota and Wisconsin were covered with a fog and a drizzling rain last night. Mail planes were grounded at St. Paul.

One of the most difficult traffic conditions observed yesterday was on Sheridan avenue, at the junction of Foster avenue, the connecting link between the popular traffic outlet to the north shore and the outer drive. At times the automobiles were backed up in stationary lines as far north as a half mile on Sheridan road, north of Foster. Many south bound motorists were directed to continue south in Sheridan road by the traffic police stationed at Foster avenue, because the busy corner was too congested to permit them to make the left turn east on to the new Outer drive.

Heavy County Traffic.

The Morton Grove highway police said traffic on Milwaukee and Waukegan roads was as heavy as the normal for a summer Sunday. Willow Springs highway police said traffic was "like the middle of July."

The Homewood station reported a volume of about 70 per cent of summer traffic, the heaviest since last fall. The state highway police at Chester, Ind., which gets reports from six counties, said the traffic was the heaviest since the closing of the World's Fair.

SMASH WINDOWS IN INDEPENDENT 8C MILK STORE

Three windows of an independent cash and carry milk store, which opened up Saturday at 2412 Blaine place, were smashed early yesterday in an attack believed by Summerdale police to have been due to the price dispute between independent and large organized dairies. The store is owned by John Horn, 6458 North Hoyne avenue, and sells milk provided by the independent Meadowmoor dairy at 8 cents a quart. None of the milk in the store was damaged, but the interior was splattered with red paint. It was thought that milk bottles full of paint had been tossed through the windows.

FAMILY OF 8 SAVED FROM FIRE

Erwin Schreiber, his wife and six children, who were carried down ladders yesterday when fire trapped them in a four story flat building at 1752 West Chicago avenue.

Flames Cheated

After an examination of the smoldering basement of a four story brick building at 1752 West Chicago avenue, firemen late yesterday determined that spontaneous combustion was the cause of a fire which caused damage estimated at $10,000.

Six children, two women and two men were carried down ladders to safety. Twenty or more other occupants of the building fled to safety. One other jumped to safety and suffered minor injuries.

The fire broke out in the basement of D. Nemtsov's hardware store and smoke soon filled the building. Nemtsov and his family, aroused from their sleep on the second floor, fled to the street after shouting warnings to other occupants of the building. A 2-11 alarm was sounded soon after fire truck No. 19 arrived and rescued those occupants who had failed to make good their escape. A 3-11 alarm was later sounded by Chief Fire Marshal Michael Corrigan.

Burglars Loot Benefit Dance Chairman's Home

Burglars, apparently seeking money collected at a benefit dance, ransacked the home of John P. Doering, 7922 Fletcher street, Elmwood Park, chairman of the entertainment committee of the Elmwood Park Taxpayers Civic association last night. The money was safe in a bank. The intruders took several watches, some jewelry, and savings banks belonging to the Doering children.

ALASKA GROWS WARMER, SAYS WEATHER EXPERT

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Two opposite climatic changes in the far north, one of which he believes may help explain the fate of the lost Norse colonies in Greenland, have been found by Prof. Robert F. Griggs of George Washington university. For some reason, he reported to the Washington Academy of Sciences, the climate of Greenland apparently has been growing colder for several centuries, while that of Alaska, on the opposite side of North America, is growing warmer. The evidence is found in plant life of the two regions. Greenland's increasingly cold climate may well be the real explanation of the mysterious disappearance of the Norse colonies, Griggs suggested. They were first settled about 980 A. D. by Norwegians under Eric the Red and once attained a population as high as 3,000. After flourishing for more than 400 years, however, their communication with Norway was cut off in 1410 and a ship visiting Greenland in 1585 found no trace of them. Bodies of the ancient colonists have been found buried in ground that is now perpetually frozen, Griggs said. In many of the graves old tree roots have been found that had grown entirely through the buried bodies, penetrating even the marrow of the bones. These trees could not have grown in frozen soil, he pointed out, and it is unlikely the colonists would have dug many feet into frozen soil to bury their dead. Griggs concluded therefore that the soil was not perpetually frozen at the time of the burials, and that a warmer climate than that of today prevailed in Greenland when the colonies were first settled nearly 1,000 years ago. Evidence that Alaska's climate is growing warmer is found in the advance of the forest line into the treeless tundra at the rate of one mile per century, Griggs said.

FRENCH POLICE HUNT GERMANS IN ROBBERY; 1 DEAD

MULHOUSE, France, Jan. 21.—(AP)—This peaceful valley, near the Swiss frontier, was excited today by a man-hunt for two Germans suspected of implication in a bank robbery at Basel Dec. 5.

A civilian mistaken for one of the fugitives was reported to have been killed by a policeman. The latter, the report said, became insane when he learned of his error.

Two policemen were shot in a Basel rooming house and two other persons wounded when the bank robbers were cornered near Laufen.

FOUR AMERICANS JAILED AT PALMA DESPITE PROMISE

Were Expecting Pardon from Spain.

【Chicago Tribune Press Service】
PALMA, Mallorca, Jan. 21.—The spirit of persecution with which American authorities have treated the four Americans concerned in last summer's happenings of a civil guard in a local hotel was evidenced again today when, despite instructions from Madrid to delay their arrest, the four were clapped into the county jail here.

Walter Blodgett of Stamford, Conn., and Roderick Mead of New York were arrested in the early hours this morning, but Mrs. Clinton B. Lockwood and her husband of West Springfield, Mass., were allowed to spend the night in their home before being taken to jail by police.

In Jail 7 Weeks Before.

The move was a complete surprise, for the four understood the Spanish foreign minister had given assurance to United States Ambassador Claude G. Bowers that they would not be jailed pending their appeal for a pardon, which probably would be granted. The Americans were under bail.

The four spent seven weeks in jail last summer before Madrid, on American insistence, induced Palma authorities to try them. They won an acquittal, but Palma appealed to the Supreme court, which last week sentenced them to six months and a day in jail, releasing Rutherford Fullerton, Columbus, O., who was only a witness to the hotel incident. It was further believed the four would be able to avoid imprisonment until the sentence was published in the official gazette, which has not been done.

The Tribune correspondent was refused permission to visit the prisoners and was told by the prison director that the arrests were made on the strength of instructions received from Madrid by the police.

Police Disregard Madrid.

There is good reason to believe that the military authorities received a message from the war ministry at Madrid last night suggesting that they delay the arrests but they preferred to take no notice.

The excuse said to have been proffered by the authorities, that the Americans intended to jump their bail, is not taken seriously in American circles here. It is obvious they had every opportunity to escape during recent months. But such was their good faith that they preferred not to do this.

It is pointed out that if the authorities merely want to assure the continued presence of the Americans on this Mediterranean island they could do this by ordinary police vigilance and without the necessity of throwing a young married woman into an unheated jail in the middle of a cold spell and where she must keep company with criminals.

Release Is Promised.

HINES DENIES MAKING ESTIMATES ON VETS' RELIEF PLAN TOO HIGH

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(Special.)—American Legion charges that the federal veterans' administration made up "wild" estimates of the costs envisioned in the Legion's veteran relief program, encountered hot denial today by Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, veterans' administrator.

Addressing a letter to Edward A. Hays, commander of the Legion, Gen. Hines denied the Legion's charges of "wild" estimates as "wholly unfounded." He took exception to inference of ulterior motives and lack of integrity.

A Legion pamphlet asserted government estimates erred on the costs of the Legion proposals, especially on allowances for service connected disabilities, widows, and children, and hospitalization. The pamphlet accused Gen. Hines of making estimates 40 per cent too high, and inferred that he did so to aid the campaign against increased veterans' benefits.

Gen. Hines retorted that the Legion had neither the information nor the experience necessary for making proper cost estimates and told Commander Hays that the Legion's own special rehabilitation committee had admitted the administration's estimates were more nearly correct than its own.

"Had representatives of the American Legion seen fit to ask for the bases of the estimates they would have been gladly furnished," Gen. Hines asserted, "and I am sure that the resultant discussion would have been mutually advantageous and would have made unnecessary this present controversy."

Later the minister informed Bowers that he understood the military authorities in Palma had information that the Americans intended to jump their bail. He said the government intended to act vigorously and that the prisoners would be released before tomorrow night.

In legal circles it is not seen that the cabinet can do much to aid the Americans beyond making indications to Palma authorities as to the advisability of setting them at liberty until the governing commission of the supreme court resolves the case.

3 BANK BANDITS CAPTURED, ONE WITH HIS BRIDE

Reveal Caches.

Three downstate gunmen were turned over to authorities of Hancock county yesterday to answer charges of bank robbery. The removal order was issued by Capt. John Steger for an effort would be made to secure the release of the prisoners on writs of habeas corpus.

Lloyd Lorraine, 35 years old, alleged leader of the gang, was arrested with his wife, Mabel, in a raid on an apartment at 835 Buena avenue early yesterday. Earlier Steger police had seized Harry Rosa, 23 years old, and brought him to Chicago in the belief he might be wanted for crimes here. Emil Cortez, 30 years old, the other member of the trio, was arrested by a detective bureau squad Thursday.

Confess Two Robberies.
Police said the three men have confessed participation in two bank robberies in recent weeks that netted them more than $15,000. Steger police also took into custody Rosa's wife, Catherine, 19 years old and a bride of seven weeks; Rosa's half brother, Tony, and Mrs. Lydia Morgan. The three women were released last night.

Three officials of the Nauvoo State bank in Hancock county, which was robbed of $11,000 last Wednesday, identified Harry Rosa, Lorraine, and Cortez as the robbers yesterday. The bank officers were C. A. Salinger, cashier; K. J. Reinhardt, assistant cashier, and S. E. Lauther, bookkeeper.

In their confessions the men disclosed where much of the loot has been cached and surrendered keys to safety deposit boxes in several banks. Keys to a new automobile purchased by Lorraine last week were also found.

Bride Near Collapse.
Police said none of the gang's robberies were committed in Chicago. It is believed, however, that the band included the five young gunmen who were captured by a posse of 250 near Basco, Ill., on Friday after robbing the State Bank of Girard of $5,000.

Rosa told police he was on his honeymoon when Steger police interrupted. His wife, whom he met in a north side cafe only four hours before he married her, was near collapse at the Marquette police station last night. She said she thought her husband was a bank teller.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS TO GET ALL FILES IN LONG REPEAL BATTLE

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(Special.)—Jouett Shouse, in his last annual report as president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, said today that all files of the association will be presented to the Library of Congress for preservation as reference and research material.

The complete story of the collapse of national prohibition in the United States is to be preserved there for historians of the future, Shouse said. "Those files will constitute a reservoir of incalculable value to students bent on detailed research into the prohibition era."

The report was largely a chronicle which Shouse said, was designed "to stand as a convenient handbook of the repeal movement and guide for future reference when inquiries are undertaken as to how repeal was carried to its final, triumphant conclusion."

ARGUES OVER MONEY; KILLED.
Cornelius Smith, 44 years old, 4218 Calumet avenue, colored, was shot and killed in his home early yesterday by Georgia Lee, 49 years old, also colored, with whom he lived in an argument over money.

medically got in touch with Minister of State Leandro Pilo Romero, who expressed himself as surprised at the news.

Later the minister informed Bowers that he understood the military authorities in Palma had information that the Americans intended to jump their bail. He said the government intended to act vigorously and that the prisoners would be released before tomorrow night.

In legal circles it is not seen that the cabinet can do much to aid the Americans beyond making indications to Palma authorities as to the advisability of setting them at liberty until the governing commission of the supreme court resolves the case.

6 DEAD IN DAY OF INJURIES IN AUTO CRASHES

While taking his 5 year old daughter for a Sunday drive, Earle Anthony, 34 years old, 7829 Schubert avenue, was fatally injured yesterday afternoon when his automobile was struck by another car at North and 78th avenues in Elmwood Park.

The child, Gloria, was taken to the Oak Park hospital with lacerations and possible internal injuries. The driver of the other car, Mrs. Ruth Gross, 29 years old, 5838 West Lake street, was held for the inquest.

William R. Smith, 44 years old, 730 West 117th street, was killed yesterday morning at Spring Valley, Ill., while he was en route to Galesburg. His car skidded on the frosty pavement and upset in a ditch, pinning him underneath.

Five other deaths increased the Cook county auto death toll for 1934 to 92. The victims:

Miss Marie Dolan, 23 years old, 4126

Basco, Ill., on Friday after robbing the State Bank of Girard of $5,000.

Rosa told police he was on his honeymoon when Steger police interrupted. His wife, whom he met in a north side cafe only four hours before he married her, was near collapse at the Marquette police station last night. She said she thought her husband was a bank teller.

PASTOR ASSAILS HALTING OF CWA CHURCH PROJECT

Calls Redecorating Work
"Social Benefit."

The Rev. James G. Halleran, pastor of Holy Family Roman Catholic church in North Chicago, yesterday criticized civil works administration officials for withdrawing support of redecorating work in his and two North Chicago churches. He addressed 500 parishioners at two morning masses.

Work on the church projects was stopped Jan. 13 by William F. Kirkham, Lake county CWA administrator, on the ground that churches do not come within the province of the CWA because they are not public buildings. Mr. Kirkham's order followed a complaint of unfairness by the Rev. Harvey P. Siemsen, minister of the Highland Park Evangelical church, after the Rev. Mr. Siemsen's application for similar aid had been denied, along with those of three other Highland Park parishes.

The matter has been referred to Frank D. Chase, Illinois CWA administrator, for final decision.

Father Halleran said yesterday that the three North Chicago church redecorating projects were included in a public buildings program submitted by Mayor Walter L. Atkinson and approved by Mr. Kirkham. Mr. Kirkham denied knowing of this until the matter was called to his attention by the Highland Park minister. Father Halleran said that work on churches is one of the best methods of carrying out expressed purposes of the CWA of "work for social and economic benefits" as outlined by President Roosevelt. He said the enduring value of such church work is in contrast to the "wasted" work on many public projects.

CHIEF OF POLICE WRITES EXPOSE, SHOOT HIMSELF

Irvington, N. J., Jan. 21.—(Special.)—Acting Chief of Police Walter Engemann shot himself today and the hospital reported him dying. Mr. Engemann last week succeeded Chief Andrew Coleman, suspended in the inquiry into charges of a police-gang alliance to operate a slot machine racket.

Prosecutor W. A. Wachenfeld of Essex county asserted Mr. Engemann left a letter of "such importance and significance" that he would keep it secret for the grand jury Tuesday. Mr. Wachenfeld ordered Mr. Engemann's home and hospital guarded and all information withheld. It was denied that official misconduct was implicated in the wounded man.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

SELLING THE BIRTHRIGHT.

An organization which calls itself the Publishers' Finance company of Raleigh, N. C., has been set up to borrow from the RFC and lend it to publishers of newspapers and magazines. The sooner this organization goes out of business the better. No self-respecting publisher will have anything to do with it after second thought.

There is, fortunately, no evidence to support the suspicion that the finance company has been formed in a sinister effort to destroy the free press of the United States. The RFC is known to have little sympathy with the scheme. The publishers whose names are associated with the venture seem to have been lured by a promoter's promise of cheap money rather than by a desire to sell their birthright for what it would fetch. With everybody else getting easy money from the government, they thought they ought to have some, too.

It was an easy error to fall into these days, but an inexcusable one. A publisher who, with his eyes open, would deliberately place himself in debt to the government must expect that from that moment nothing which he might say about the government could have any value. He could not commend the government without raising the suspicion that he did so for a price. He could not attack the government without fear that his note would not be renewed. No publisher who had any sense of the history of his profession in maintaining free government could contemplate for a moment a self-imposed subservience which would deprive him of his highest function. A publisher in debt to the government is no longer a publisher; he is a printer of comic strips and beauty hints.

In a famous speech, Richard Brinsley Sheridan cried that he would give a venal government "all the power that place can confer to purchase up submission and overawe resistance" and still, with the help of a free press, would guarantee to bring such a government down. It never occurred to him that free newspapers would deliberately gas themselves; that it would not be a question of purchasing submission but of selling subservience for a share in interest rates.

AMERICAN PRISONERS IN SPAIN.

Spanish authority seems unable to make up its mind what shall be done with the Americans imprisoned before the law because one or more of them hit a Spanish civil guard in the course of an altercation with a porter in Palma, Mallorca. Five of them, including a woman, were confined in a filthy, medieval lockup nearly two months before the United States could procure their release on bail. They were tried by a military tribunal in the island and acquitted. Their case was then removed to Madrid for review, and now the Supreme court has sentenced four of the five, including the woman, to six months in jail.

The case is becoming preposterous, and the state department is justified in informing the Spanish government that the United States will not understand a further persecution of its citizens. In the laws of any country which maintains a proper relevancy of punishment to offense, the offense of these Americans would have been regarded as disorderly conduct or a misdemeanor.

It may be the desire of Spain to invest the civil guard with the full majesty of sovereignty, but when a guard becomes involved in a dispute and gets his face slapped, if such were the offense, justice in the case cannot be reconciled to the experience which the Americans have undergone. The Mallorcans were quite tough about it when they threw the Yankees into the medieval keep and exposed them for nearly two months to disease. A stiff reminder through Ambassador Bowers that civilized countries do not treat aliens in this fashion would be quite to the point, and it should be insisted upon until Spain releases these victims of Spanish judicial severity.

OVERTON IN THE SENATE.

When considering the Connally committee report that Louisiana politics is full of high handed fraud, with its elections tainted, but that Senator Overton was the innocent beneficiary, if a beneficiary, it might be well to recall a few other cases. Newberry of Michigan was persecuted in the senate that he resigned, both in protest and in self-protection. Of him it was alleged that in struggling against the political power of Henry Ford he had spent too much money, not that it was spent dishonorably, but just that it was too much, although not in comparison with other expense accounts.

Smith of Illinois was turned back at the door, not because anything tainted his credentials, one by appointment and one by election, but because he had accepted a campaign contribution which a man wise enough to see its meaning or ethical enough to resent it would have refused. There was nothing wrong with the vote which elected Smith. The charge merely was against his political character.

Before Smith, Lorimer had lost his seat, not because of acts attributed to him, but because it was proved that his election in the Illinois legislature was brought about by bribery, to which it was not alleged that he was a party.

The committee reports that Long's control of Louisiana has corrupted virtually all the political processes, although the people of Louisiana are themselves doing the utmost to get rid of the practices of the political gang which rule by means of them. Various technicalities are advanced to prove that this scandalous situation has no effect upon the qualification of Senator Overton, whom Long nominated and elected. The senate has full right to correct the situation by a moral example. Sometimes the senators are highly moral, sometimes they are aquiescent, and sometimes they are tolerant and indifferent. If Mr. Overton keeps his seat it will be because the senate this time is indifferent.

CHURCHILL GETS ON THE AIR.

Winston Churchill got his chance at the radio the other night after a long struggle with the British Broadcasting corporation. Churchill is impressed by the probable dangers in the empire's future, but he is a responsible statesman and not a scare monger. He believes the present government is not taking these dangers into account, but is temporizing with necessities while the people are neither informed nor thoughtful of their prospects.

He has access to the newspapers, subject only to the editorial willingness to print his article. The newspapers, having escaped from the licensing system which once controlled them, are free to accept his arguments and print them. When he wanted to address the people of the country by radio the government control was the obstruction. British radio is not free. It does not permit private enterprise. Programs are made up by a governmental corporation. Whatever the British listener gets from his own national broadcasting is what the corporation gives him, and that is along stolid, bureaucratic lines of entertainment and instruction.

The broadcasting corporation feared that Churchill would criticize the government policies and, consequently, he could not use the radio. He protested and made his case against this denial of free speech, but the corporation stood out against him for months, refusing to yield to the point that governmental control should permit free, responsible discussion of public questions. When Mr. Churchill at last got the privilege his speech was well within all the proprieties of such discussion. It might have been assumed from the beginning it would be.

Editorial of the Day

RECOVERY FIRST.

[New York Herald Tribune.]

The one fact made clear by Prof. Tugwell in his extraordinary Chicago speech is that in his program he puts social revolution first and recovery second. No, in fact, do all the left wingers who surround the President. There is method in their madness. So long as they can keep recovery waiting around the corner they feel that they have a better chance of stampeding the President and the country into a truly radical experiment with governmentally controlled industry. Once a measure of property returns, their chance to effect a social revolution in the name of emergency relief is done for, they feel.

It is the pressure of these revolutionary enthusiasts which has caused the bulk of the confusion at Washington. What began as a sane and sure footed plan for the voluntary self-regulation of key industries has developed into a mad scramble toward a sovietized America. In a few weeks and months this country is to be completely unionized, completely codified, completely regulated by Washington as to wages, prices, output, the expenditure of new capital.

Gen. Johnson has done as much toward accomplishing this appalling miracle as could possibly be expected—more, undoubtedly, than any one else could possibly have done. But in the meantime, in the welter of wrangling, blundering and doubt at Washington, recovery has flown out the window. It could hardly be otherwise. Conditions are fundamentally sound. The upward tendency is unmistakable. But how can business possibly go forward amid such confusion?

The remedy is plain. It is to reject the influence of the Tugwells and insist that in all that is done recovery must have the right of way over revolution. As a matter of obvious fact it is nonsense to assert that the country ever voted for a revolution or really wants a revolution today. It does want recovery, and wants it very much. It is willing to try any reasonable experiment that offers hope of expediting recovery. But in our guess it would, if given a chance, kick out the window unceremoniously any experiment which delayed or hampered recovery, however noble its motive.

What would be the effect of thus slowing down the processes of industrial change now being wrought at Washington is plain. Instead of dictatorial fiat to industry and labor to organize this way, not that, to submit to whatever degree of regulation seems most to the administration, there would be a sane and careful approach to the enormously difficult and complex problems involved—as Messrs. Swope and Lund, for example, have outlined them—and an ultimate solution of them in accordance with the considered will of industry, of labor and of the American people.

Does a majority sentiment in America desire all labor to be unionized? Does a majority sentiment wish all industry to be subjected to an administrative control at Washington, extending to every detail of wages, prices and capital expenditure? The most the administration can assert is that since no vote has been taken nobody can be absolutely certain that it doesn't. But the speed with which opposition to NRA has developed as its dictatorial powers have expanded and its interference with every detail of American life has been revealed, shows how strong is the resentment against the effort to enact a social revolution by executive fiat in the name of recovery.

The juggling with the dollar would also cease if recovery were placed ahead of revolution. For the avowed object of inflation is to help the farmer and debtors generally—to take from the creditor and give to the debtors. There are the soundest reasons for believing that it will do everybody, including the debtors—except the smart speculator—far more harm than good. But the aim of the President in his juggling is unmistakably part of his desire to remake the property structure of the country.

Just how heavily he has hampered recovery by this tampering with the currency is distressingly plain. Even more fundamentally than NRA, the rubber dollar has undermined confidence and discouraged progress.

Recovery first! Here is, we submit, the one simple motto that would end the confusion at Washington and place the country once more on the upward road.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

IF, AS, AND WHEN the new president of Cuba shows he is able to keep his job the United States may recognize him. But that "if, as, and when" thing seems to fall down in the case of Cuban presidents, because twenty-four hours after the U. S. A. has recognized the Cuban president the populace may rise up and give him the bum's rush. There's no saying "if, as, and when" about Cuba. It's just "if."

"ADMIRAL BYRD Gets Back to Old Home, His Former Base in the Antarctic"—Radiogram. "Ah," said the admiral as he stepped ashore, "back again to the old home. 'Tis three years since I saw the old familiar spot, though it seems but yesterday! Nothing is changed; the same old ice, the same old snow, the same old sky, the same old ocean! Wonderful to come back after all these years and find everything just the same as it was when I went away so long ago. Now let us get the pails and the milking stools and follow the dear old cow across the ice fields to where the dear old sea paths are chewing their cuds in the shade of the old iceberg tree."

TO REMEMBER, TO FORGET.

Things there are to remember; things there are to forget.

Put your hand on my shoulder; the time has not come yet.

While we are one together all we have lived is dear. The rain and the pleasant weather, the running horse and the fear.

Things might have been far other. They were as they were; who knows

Whether or not good fortune had given us life's red rose?

While we were one together, hand clasping tremulous hand.

This was joy's fullest measure—to know and to understand.

After our days together, one of us, sitting alone, Touching old chords of pleasure, may torture them into moan.

Things that are now to remember perhaps we should then forget.

Put your hand on my shoulder; the time has not come yet.

ANOTHER big prison break. This time seven convicts climb the wall of the Kansas state penitentiary. Our reformers are overlooking a chance. The convicts must be dissatisfied with our prisons. Now is the time to start a campaign for bigger and brighter jails. Write to your congressman today.

THE DIVORCE COURT RECORDS reveal that a lady forsook her husband, a bear trainer, because she had to sleep in the same room with the bear. So she eloped with a flea trainer. But the lady was wrong. People will not shun a lady who slumbers in the same room with a trained bear unless she takes the bear along with her when she goes calling and they can see for themselves whether she has it or not. But trained fleas—well, that's different. You never can tell whether they're along or not.

OUR BENEVOLENT GOVERNMENT is buying subsistence farms all through the west and encouraging city dwellers to go back to the farm and subsist. But, on the other hand, when we get a homestead from the government [thank you kindly, government] then how are we going to subsist if we follow the government's instructions and plow up the wheat crop and the corn crop and the cotton crop and slay the little piggies and bury 'em? Would we have to plow under the geraniums and trilliums and larkspur that we would plant at once on our subsistence farm? And if we have to slay the family hog and bury him would we have to bury the family cow and the family horse and the bee? Because all us city dwellers who start subsistence farming would insist on keeping a bee to make our own honey. And, of course, we would have to have a silk worm so we could raise our own silk! And a coffee tree to raise our own coffee! But would the government make us plow under the bee and the silk worm and the coffee tree? The idea of subsistence farming is swell, but what are we going to subsist on? And we've just got to subsist. It's an old American custom.

AND WE DO HOPE the Golden Rule won't be treated the same way as the gold dollar and demoralized forty per cent, so that it will read, "Do others before they do you." Or has it happened? Things change so fast nowadays it's hard to keep up with them.

AND NOW THEY'RE OUT with another scientific test to find out when a man is drunk. This time you're told to take a cubic inch of the subject's blood and analyze it and find out how many milligrams of alcohol it contains. No! Too messy! The old rule still holds good; trying to kiss the bartender good-night.

TREASURES.

What have I saved, from all my days,
From pilgrimages long?
I have a friend, a gleaming hope,
And one thing more—a song;
And if my friends should prove untrue,
My hope go glimmering,
I still shall have, as daylight ends,
One song—of faith!—to sing.

THIS WINTER WEATHER has been so mild and gracious we are expecting Gen. Johnson to say any time now: "Of course we have made mistakes, and we may make some more. There might be a blizzard in February and a deep snow in March, but, taken by and large, it must be admitted the NRA has given this country a most delightful winter."

THE GERMAN GENETICS PROGRAM.

THE papers state that the Germans have announced officially their eugenics program. They have arranged for about seventeen hundred centers where men and women are to appear to have their fitness for parenthood determined. Just how they are to decide who is to appear has not been announced.

The person cited to appear must undergo something of an examination by the official physician of the center; and the social and family history and the behavior record are to be collected by social workers. The facts for and against the individual as a prospective parent are to be presented to a commission. If the commission finds that the person under investigation would beget children that would vitiate the German stock, they decree that a simple operation should be done. He or she is then taken to a government hospital, where the operation is done by official surgeons. The operation is a simple one, and, in the case of the male, free from all danger; in the case of the female, almost so, and it has no effect except to bring about permanent sterility.

Some of the conditions that will cause the operation to be performed are: Ectasy, insanity, feeble-mindedness, a type in which inheritance plays a large part; feeble-mindedness; criminal constitution; enemy of the people type; constitutional inferiority of the kind that causes the individual to be an inhabitant of poorhouses, workhouses; an established "baggage," a generally worthless, shiftless individual; and those with certain inheritable diseases.

Doubtless, as experience accumulates, the causes that bring about this operation will be modified. It is estimated that half a million people will be sterilized under this law.

A program of this kind goes by the name negative eugenics. The United States has had and is still having considerable experience with such a program. Several states have sterilization laws, and in some the number of inmates of prisons and asylums that have been sterilized under the law reaches well into the thousands. The procedure has been upheld by the courts. Judge Olson had the Municipal court of Chicago put out a summary treating of the procedure from the legal as well as the genetic angle. This is said to be only a start, and, at that, a minor one, in the German genetics program. They contemplate doing much in the way of positive genetics.

NOSE BLEEDS.

Miss J. H. writes: "What causes nose bleeds? My adolescents are out and I do not have nasal trouble. These leave me very weak, and I sometimes have fainting spells after."

2. It can't be that I have too much blood pressure, because I am anemic and have low blood pressure. Could that have anything to do with it?

REPLY.

1. Among the many causes of a tendency to nose bleeds are arterio-sclerosis and high blood pressure, radious vessels and bleeding points in the nose, scurvy and some blood disorders, rapid growth.

2. I do not know what is responsible for your disorder, but low blood pressure is not.

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE.

J. O. D. writes: "1. What are the symptoms of high blood pressure? 2. The cure?"

REPLY.

1. Among the symptoms are headaches, dizziness, head aches, nose bleeds, and the results of a blood pressure test, and symptoms of heart or kidney disease. The most dependable symptom is the pressure test, as shown on the instrument used for testing.

2. In certain cases training in relaxation and emotional calm is the best treatment. Some call for special attention to eating habits, bowel habits, and other habits. Some call for attention to the thyroid, others for less tobacco, and others for change of occupation. A new method is X-raying the adrenal and pituitary areas.

ILLNESS IN MORNING.

Mrs. P. R. J. writes: "What besides pregnancy causes nausea and weakness, usually in the morning, immediately after arising?"

REPLY.

Adolescence is a possibility. Hyperemesis or too little blood sugar is another. Have you tried the old remedy for nausea of pregnancy, namely, eating a few crackers while still in bed? Or eating a little sugar at that time? Or taking coffee or sugar in bed? Or a drink of a sweet beverage containing caffeine? What has your physician found?

IT IS COMMON TROUBLE.

C. B. writes: I read in your column where you quoted a doctor who said that some medicines, after being used a few times, have a tendency to cause constipation.

REPLY.

Many have had this experience.

CITIZENSHIP PAPERS.

Chicago, Jan. 18.—[Friend of the People.]—My father became a naturalized citizen in 1928. Now that I have attained the age of 21, is it necessary for me to take out papers in my own name?

H. F.

No. As a practical matter, however, the writer will be required to produce his father's certificate of naturalization each time he is required to produce such proof. If the writer desires to secure a certificate of derivative citizenship he may call at this office for the necessary information and forms.

DEEDING PROPERTY.

Chicago, Jan. 17.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Husband and wife decided really to the latter's sister. The latter later decided it back. The former decided it was recorded; the latter was not. Is it legally possible for the wife to re-deed the property to her sister without the signature of her husband and, of course, without his consent?

H. G. F.

1. We assume that you mean deeded it back to the husband and wife.

2. Obviously on these facts the wife could not convey more than half interest. Even if the title were entirely in her name, a conveyance in which her husband did not join would be subject to his dower interest.

1. Wage claims to the extent of $300 earned within three months of bankruptcy proceedings are preferred ahead of ordinary debts in the bankruptcy proceedings.

2. File a claim for the preference.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY EUGENE SPEER.

[Chicago Tribune Staff Service.]

ATHENS.—An American visitor to the Balkans is impressed by the difference between Greek and American newspapers. The almost immediate comes to the conclusion that numerous newspaper readers in the Balkans never learn the facts.

There is a daily barrage of distorted, doped, and dressed-up newspapers which, before going to press, take a heavy shot in the arm from the propaganda needle. Newspapers which change from one violent policy to the opposite as cabinet succeeds cabinet, because the party in power wants a subsidy, which expunge a man's name from their activities in favor of any particular country because that country pays them, are on sale at every newsstand.

Even governments themselves go into the publishing business and conduct their propaganda across neighboring frontiers through the international language of the Balkans and the near east—French. The papers are given prominent places on the Athens newspaper and tobacco kiosks, so that nobody can avoid seeing them.

The conceptions of a free press which went into the first amendment to the American constitution are unheard of in many editorial rooms here, nor in any of the newspapers they produce is there the ring of an independent journal observing its true functions of public service.

Whatever Greek government comes to power, there is the assurance of press cooperation in Le Messager d'Athènes. This is the recognized organ of the government of the day, and its policies are largely directed by the foreign minister who happens to be in office. It is never critical of the government, and always contemptuous of the opposition. If Venizelos, whom it rakes over the coals daily, came back to power tomorrow he could use the same newspaper to ret back at the present prime minister, Panaghis Tsaldaris. It is also printed in French.

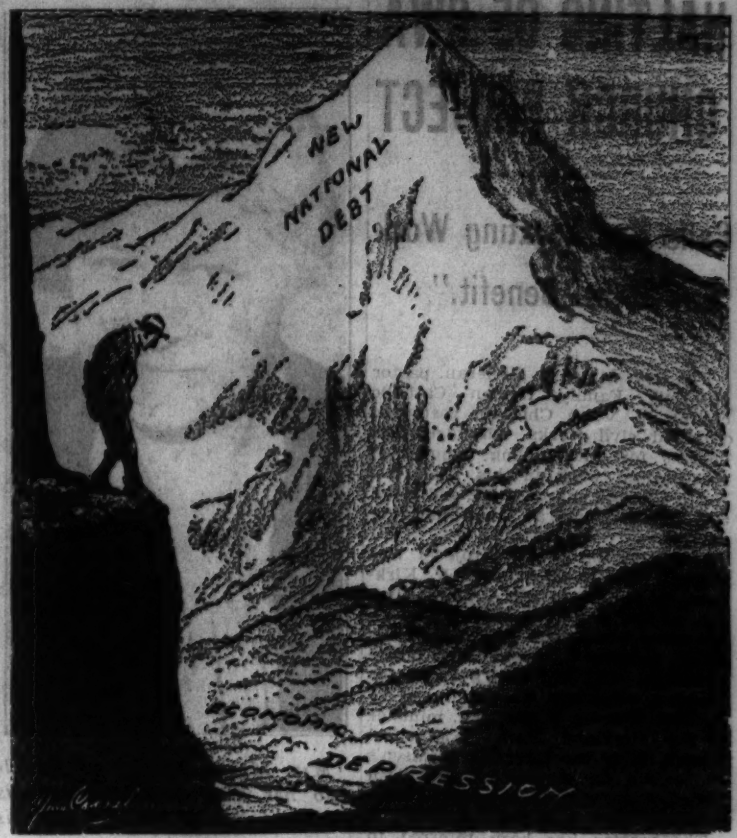

It is the usual practice in many parts of Europe for a faction or interest to buy or subsidize a newspaper, and these, if political newspapers, are read exclusively by adherents of that particular faction, who form their opinions from that source alone. Some editors in France and elsewhere have observed this when they had none through editorial attacks on the person or organization by whom they wished to be paid. After the bribe is received they become favorable.

Many countries, however, do not trouble to buy off an editor. Under the guise of a newspaper, they handle their external propaganda themselves, dishing it up as news. King Boris, whose country is very near isolation in the Balkans at the moment, bombards outside opinion, also in French, through La Bulgare. This is on sale at most Athens newsstands.

THE MINNESOTA MORTGAGE CASE.

Chicago, Jan. 18.—The key sentence of the Supreme court of the United States in upholding the claimed and asserted power of Minnesota to enact a "law impairing the obligation of contracts," notwithstanding the clause in the constitution of the United States forbidding it, was reported by THE TRIBUNE as follows:

While emergency does not create power, emergency may furnish the occasion for the exercise of power.

That is, while no emergency can give power to a state to overstep the contract-impaired clause of the constitution, an emergency may yet be the occasion for the exercise by a state of power in a manner in which it is forbidden to exert it.

That reasoning is reminiscent of the fundamental error committed by the Supreme court 45 years ago in the first prohibition case, where it confused regulation and prohibition and became responsible for a reign of governmental tyranny of an unprecedented kind which was only recently cast off by the people. The action of the Supreme court in upholding the Minnesota statute recalls the observation made in 1891 by John F. Dillon, a great figure at the bar of his time, to a law class at Yale, having in mind, very probably, the decision in the prohibition case four years before. Speaking of constitutional limitations, like the clause which forbids Minnesota and other states to impair the obligation of contracts, and whether those limitations are to be virile or worthless, he said:

The value, however, of these constitutional guarantees wholly depends upon whether they are fairly interpreted and justly and with even hand fully and fearlessly enforced by the courts.

If there is any problem which can be said to be yet unsettled, it is whether the bench of this country, and federal, is able to bear the great burden of supporting under all circumstances the fundamental law against popular, or supposed popular, demands for enactments in conflict with it. It is the loftiest function and the most sacred duty of the judiciary—unique in the history of the world—to support, maintain and give full effect to the constitution against every act of the legislature or the executive in violation of it. This is the great jewel of our liberties. We must not, like the base Judean, throw a pearl away richer than all his tribe. This is the final breakwater against the haste and passions of the people—against the tumultuous ocean of democracy. It must at all costs be maintained.

The problem to which Judge Dillon referred is less settled now than it was then. The lawyer and the editor should take notice. THOMAS JAMES NORTON.

THE REPUBLICAN SLATE.

Chicago, Jan. 18.—According to the press, the Republican county committee is busy preparing a slate of primary candidates.

This is an assumption of power not considered in the laws governing primaries nor was it intended that the ward committees collectively should decide who should be party candidates.

The direct primary law was conceived in the idea the people would make the selection. It appears, however, in practice that the ward committees, or a majority, make the selection for the people. That is the practical effect because political organizations, through the combined efforts, nominate the candidates proposed by the ward bosses. What is the result? Candidates who are not representative of the masses and are subservient to their orders. If the county committee were composed of representative, clean-minded Republicans, the practice might not be so disastrous, but when the committee is composed of all manner of viciousness it is discouraging to think the voters are not more independent.

There seems to be some fear of the independent voters, whom the politicians propose to appease by submitting their candidates to a group of respectable citizens for their approval. The business men who will act in such a capacity cannot perceive the real purpose, which is to keep the public from looking at the ward committees, who in fifty city wards again seek reelection. Until the county committee is purged, political reform in Chicago is a mockery.

THE SMALL HOME OWNER.

Chicago, Jan. 17.—Walter Nordin writes of the farmers and business men who get in trouble through the use of borrowed money. Isn't this true also of the so-called small home owner who takes a home that is heavily mortgaged? He never really owned the place. Then why must we help him to keep a hold on it? If he can't pay his taxes, let him give it over to some one who can. He will be no worse off than the rest of us who have always paid rent.

PORTO RICANS TO ASK CONGRESS FOR SELF-RULE

Insular Factions Woo Gov. Winship for Support.

BY HARWOOD HULL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SAN JUAN, P. R., Jan. 21.—With the appointment of Maj. Gen. Blanton Winship, retired, to succeed Robert H. Gore as governor of Porto Rico, the island returns to its former status as chief of the war department until such time as congress determines whether statehood or something else is to be its final lot.

Liberals, through Senator Luis Muñoz Marín, have announced they will ask congress for independence. Resident Commissioner Santiago Iglesias, Socialist, however, favors organization as a territory as a step toward statehood, while Senator Rafael Martínez Nadal, Republican head of the coalition majority, favors a prompt and clear declaration for statehood.

What support or opposition Gov. Winship may give to these plans has the leaders guessing, with the more conservative inclined to believe he will concern himself more with the administration of the island in line with new deal policies.

Senate Leader Disappointed.

The President's announcement of the Winship appointment caused some disappointment for Senate President Martínez Nadal.

Under the leadership of Martínez Nadal the coalition of the last election polled 210,000 votes to the Liberals' 174,000. The Coalition, composed of former Republicans and Unionists in the Union-Republican party and the Socialists, was formed to prevent the possible return to power of Senator Antonio R. Barceló, Liberal leader. But the coalition in its year in office has not succeeded in ousting from government service many Liberals to make way for coalition appointments.

The process of Liberal elimination was well under way with Gov. Gore's consent, if not aid, coalitionists were determined to complete the task which they considered the last election imposed on them. The substitution of Gen. Winship for Gov. Gore leaves the coalition for the time in the air.

Indications of Civil Strife.

Not all of the coalition leaders are as pessimistic as Senator Martínez Nadal. Dr. Leopoldo Figueroa, high in coalition councils, considers there is no reason to fear that under Gov. Winship harmony will not prevail between the executive and legislative branches of the insular government.

But with loyalty to Gov. Gore out of the new picture there are indications that all is not happy in the coalition family. So far its strength has sprung from a common opposition to the Liberals. Internally its leaders differ. The one individual credited with ability to maintain harmony within the coalition is Iglesias, founder of the Socialist party.

Liberals have already pledged their support to Gov. Winship. For them any change was welcomed. While in the legislature the Liberals have a very slim minority it is the Liberal boast that the party represents an island majority.

Why Gore Resigned.

Two factors are credited here with determining the President's action in changing governors. The annual session of the insular legislature convenes Feb. 12. Gov. Gore's continuance would doubtless have resulted in no greater evidences of island harmony than existed prior to his departure in November. It is considered that such a situation did not appeal to Washington.

Then unexpectedly a gasoline boycott at the end of December not only paralyzed island business, but resulted in such complete disorder that Acting Gov. Horton and his executive council were told the island had only mob rule. Temporarily the tensity of the situation was relieved by the fixing of the price of gasoline at 20 cents. A further boycott is threatened if the price of 25 cents a gallon is restored.

Gov. Winship's first tasks will be to wrestle with the gasoline situation and the legislature. That his appointment is a civil one has not overshadowed the fact that he is a major general, the first army man to serve as governor since the establishment of civil government in 1900.

AID OF HITLER DENOUNCES FREE TRADE IN FOODS

Agriculture Chief Explains Reform Policy.

WEIMAR, Germany, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Admitting that what the Hitler government was doing now for German peasantry would perhaps be fully appreciated only 500 to 1,000 years hence, Walter Darre, Nazi commissioner of agriculture, explained the agricultural reform policy today at a congress of peasant leaders from throughout the Reich.

Darre denounced free trade in foodstuffs, based on supply and demand, as ruinous to the farmer and consumer alike. The hardest fight in passing measures providing hereditary farm lands and state control of dairy produce, he said, concerned taxes, interest rates, loans, and mortgages.

Revolutions Rooted in Peasantry.

The government is determined to take capital out of the hands of capitalism, he asserted, and break the interest bondage under which farmers groaned so long.

Three European revolutions which endured, those of the Swedish King Gustavus Vasa, Oliver Cromwell, and Benito Mussolini, owe their permanence to the fact they were rooted in the peasantry, Darre said.

The Dutch and Swiss, he continued, have been lost to the old German empire because rulers failed to allot the peasantry its rightful place.

Kaiser Wilhelm II, he said, was equally to blame because he dropped Bismarck, who had the true interest of the farmer at heart.

Nazi Foreign Chief Reports.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

BERLIN, Jan. 21.—Chancellor Hitler has granted a special audience to E. W. Bohle, leader of the "foreign department of the Nazi party." Bohle recently brought presents for the chancellor from Nazis living in foreign countries. He also presented lists of votes cast by foreign groups in the November plebiscite, which, according to official reports, "were as strongly for Hitler as the votes in Germany."

Nazi leaders are cheered by news from abroad. In Holland, for instance, according to the Vossische Zeitung, the leader of the Dutch Nazis, Engelbert Mueller, reports 23,000 members in his movement. He spoke in the Amsterdam concert hall and asserted his party now ranked as the third strongest group in Holland. The Socialists and Catholics are first. The Polish Nazis are making gains. Hitler declares, pointing to recent elections as proof.

More Newspapers Suppressed.

Meanwhile, mortality among German newspapers continues at a high rate. Six more daily newspapers have been suppressed.

Founded 57 years ago, the Schlesische Geisteskurier has ceased to appear. The Hannoverische Landeszeitung, former mouthpiece of the German Hanoverian party, from now on will appear only once a week. The Niederdeutsche Zeitung, the former Hanover organ of the Nationalists, has died, as have the Hildesheimer Abendblatt and the Braunschweiger Zeitung.

Der Volksstaat of Dresden, has been suppressed by the police for an indefinite period.

RUSSIA HONORS LENIN; OBSERVES 'BLOODY SUNDAY'

MOSCOW, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Soviet Russia today observed the death anniversary of two important dates in its revolutionary calendar—the tenth anniversary of Lenin's death, which fell today, and the 29th anniversary of Bloody Sunday, when the czar's troops shot down persons who appealed to the imperial palace in St. Petersburg for bread. The latter anniversary comes tomorrow.

No particular ceremonies were held in honor of Lenin, but every building in Moscow flew a black bordered red flag and newspapers devoted their entire issues to articles about the dead leader of bolshevism.

The order of Lenin was bestowed on Protas, V. P. Vorobiev and B. I. Zbarsky, noted biologists, for their work in preserving Lenin's body, which still lies on a glass enclosed catafalque in a massive granite tomb on Red square, where thousands view it daily.

GREECE PONDS WAY OF GETTING RID OF INSULL

Claim Council Will O. K. Expulsion.

ATHENS, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Authoritative sources continued today to insist the council of state will confirm the expulsion from Greece of Samuel Insull, fugitive Chicago utilities magnate.

Meanwhile there was much speculation here as to how the deportation will be carried out. The council will announce its decision Tuesday.

The government organ Prota quoted Premier Tzaldaris as saying that the government will respect the decision of the council, whatever it may be, on Insull's final appeal against an order of expulsion effective Jan. 31.

Cabinet Member Criticized.

The opposition organ, Philothelou, interpreted published statements of the minister of the interior as a determination to expel Insull regardless of the state council's decision.

One of Insull's lawyers declared: "If the minister of the interior made such a statement, it is not worth considering. If the council decided to favor Insull and the minister disregarded the decision, he would have to go to jail."

"If the decision is unfavorable to my client, it is impossible to predict the manner in which the government will execute the expulsion, as there is no similar precedent. Insull has not yet filed any petition for a passport or visa."

The United States had previously revoked Insull's original passport.

Albania Opens Doors.

In response to a question, the Albanian minister to Athens said he would visa Insull's American passport without question if it were presented in good order.

"It would be impossible," the minister added, "to visa a laissez passer (a permit of passage which the Greek government intimated recently it would provide Insull) without instructions from Tirana. I have no such instructions now." He said he would telegraph to Tirana for instructions.

The United States government is seeking to extradite Insull to face charges of embezzlement in connection with the collapse of his utilities interests in Chicago. The Greek courts twice have refused to grant the extradition request and the government recently decided he must leave the country. The council of state's decision expected Tuesday is on Insull's final appeal for extension of residence permit.

STREET FIGHTING MARKS O'DUFFY'S ATHLONE SPEECH

ATHLONE, Irish Free State, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Wild fighting scenes marked the visit here today of Gen. Owen O'Duffy, leader of the outlawed Blue-shirt party. Civic guards swinging their batons charged twice into groups fighting on the outskirts of a meeting addressed by Gen. O'Duffy.

State Insists O'Duffy Be Tried.

DUBLIN, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The Irish Free State, it was announced today, will seek dismissal of a conditional order barring the trial of Gen. Owen O'Duffy on charges of inciting to kill President Eamon De Valera when the high court meets on Wednesday.

An order was issued Jan. 1 prohibiting a military tribunal from proceeding with the trial against O'Duffy, leader of the United Ireland party.

HULL TRIP SHOWS SOUTH AMERICA WANTS U.S. GOODS

Nations Anxious to Sell,
Willing to Buy.

BY NORMAN INGLEY.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

SANTIAGO, Chile, Jan. 21.—With Secretary of State Cordell Hull back home after his Pan-American pilgrimage, the South American states have begun to reflect upon the achievements at Montevideo and speculate regarding the future of inter-American relations.

As a refreshing change from the reactions to the Havana conference five years ago, newspapers and politicians here pay almost unanimous tribute to the work of the United States delegation to Montevideo. They recognize that Mr. Hull played a "difficult role" very successfully, that he displayed "well-timed candor" and injected new confidence in the Pan-American movement.

Eager for Trade.

Having handed out these bouquets, South Americans turn to the burning question of the hour: What about more trade? During his trip round the continent, both on the east and west coasts, Hull was plagued nearly every day by diplomats and traders as to how they could sell more to the United States.

Brazil wanted to sell more coffee. Argentina was anxious to know about its linseed. Chile clamored for more wine quotas and Peru and Ecuador boosted their own tropical fruits. Even Bolivia sent down a delegation from its Andean capital to greet Hull on the motorship Santa Barbara, ostensibly to talk about the Chaco war, but also to put in a word for its tin exports.

Favor U. S. Preference.

While the American delegation leader turned a courteous and patient ear to the Pan-American salesmen, he was aware of the task of reminding them and their governments that trade consisted of imports as well as exports. This was underlined by several of the newspapers in the leading capital cities.

La Nacion, for example, issued this reminder: "The United States expects to sell to us just as much as we export to her. For many reasons, including that of debt, she is entitled to preference in South America. The main reason for such preference is because for most of us the United States remains the only free market for our products."

All press organs agreed that, thanks to recent statements by President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull, the spiritual union of the Americas could now be taken for granted and that the development of inter-American trade remained the big task for the Pan-American movement.

Lines of Two Continents.

El Mercurio, doyen of the South American press, stated that Hull rendered his greatest service to Pan-Americanism by underlining the "new responsibilities of the new world." It said that Montevideo revealed that North and South America were now lined up to play a vital part in international affairs. It added:

"According to the eternal law of racial renovation civilized progress is inclining more and more to the west. The new world, isolated from political and social instability and free from historical bitterness, is ready for rapid development. The United States has shown us what amazing progress can be registered in such conditions. With her help in the Pan-American field we can do likewise."

SECRETARY HULL RETURNS FROM SOUTH AMERICA

Conclave.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Secretary Hull returned to the capital from South America today and went to the White House to give President Roosevelt a personal report on the Pan-American conference at Montevideo.

In a statement to the press, the secretary of state said: "Confidence born of the feeling that the United States, instead of being arrogant or indifferent big brother, is sincerely eager for the role of equal partnership with the other Americas has resulted in a surge of good will toward the United States."

Hull declined comment on his talk with the President, but it was known that in addition to reporting on the Pan-American conference and on his trip through a half dozen South American countries, he discussed the Cuban situation.

Ahead of Schedule.

After traveling to Panama on a commercial liner the secretary flew across the isthmus and proceeded to Key West, Fla., on the United States cruiser Richmond in order to return to Washington sooner than planned. At Key West he was given the background of Cuban events by Jefferson Caffery, President Roosevelt's personal representative in the Cuban situation.

The Pan-American Conference.

"The Pan-American conference marked a transition in the attitude of Latin America toward the United States which perhaps the average citizen does not yet fully comprehend."

"Apart from the tangible acts of the conference—and these acts were of wide import in matters of bettered trade relations, multiplied friendly contacts and tranquility in international dealings—there was undoubtedly developed an affinity of spirit and sentiment, based on the common interests of the 21 American republics, unlike anything that has existed in generations."

Lauds U. S. Policy.

"Our own enlightened attitude toward these neighboring nations, as expressed in the 'good neighbor' policy of this administration, is unquestionably a large factor in this metamorphosis."

Hull is expected to confer again with President Roosevelt early this week after discussing the Cuban situation with William Phillips, acting secretary during his absence in South America, and Sumner Welles, assistant secretary of state in charge of Latin American affairs.

Although no official announcement has been made, it has been indicated that Cuba's measure of stabilization, through the election of Carlos Mendive as president, has brought recognition of the island republic by the United States much nearer. Observers believe some announcement concerning Cuba will be forthcoming as quickly as Hull has had an opportunity to go over the entire question thoroughly with the President.

INCOMES IN U. S. FALL 30 BILLION FROM '29 TO '32

Business and Industry Dip Into Surplus.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(Special.)—Total incomes received by American workers and investors tumbled from more than 40 billion dollars in 1929 to less than 10 billion between 1929 and 1932, the department of commerce announced today.

During this period, the report also shows, business and industry dug deeper into its pocket for funds with which to support mass purchasing power than the government, even under President Roosevelt's huge spending program, ever did or proposed to do.

In the three depression years, 1930, '31 and '32 business and industry paid out to its investors and workers 24 billion dollars more than it took in, digging into its surpluses and reserves to keep up pay roll and interest payments at a time when it was losing money itself, the report says.

U. S. Would Spend Less.

The government has spent and proposed to spend between 1931 and 1933 on strictly business reviving enterprises such as public works less than 13 billion dollars, 46 per cent less than business itself has already laid out, a review of budget figures shows.

The commerce department's report was brought about by the maintenance of interest payments, rather uniformly up to 1932, with only a small decline then. Dividend payments were well maintained in 1930, but declined thereafter more rapidly than labor income.

Wages Suffer Most.

The report also pointed out, however, that while all types of income had suffered from the depression the different types had not all suffered equally.

Wages have suffered the most severely in the general decline since 1929, with a falling off of 50 per cent in those industries in which it was possible to segregate this item. Salaries dropped 40 per cent, much less rapidly than wages, with the most severe curtailment occurring in 1932.

A significant feature in declining trends is apparent as between labor income and property income; by 1932 the former had fallen off 40 per cent, while property income distributed receded but 30 per cent. This situation was brought about by the maintenance of interest payments, rather uniformly up to 1932, with only a small decline then. Dividend payments were well maintained in 1930, but declined thereafter more rapidly than labor income.

Miss Erminger Sets Wedding for April 30

to Be Bridegroom.

BY JUDITH CASS.
On the last day of April at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon Miss Carolyn Erminger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howell B. Erminger Jr. of 199 Lake Shore drive, will become the bride of John De Laitre, son of Mr. and Mrs. Karl de Laitre of Minneapolis. The service will be read in the John Timothy Stone chapel of the Fourth Presbyterian church.

Miss Erminger and her fiancé completed these plans yesterday shortly after his arrival by plane from Minneapolis. Then they hurried away to spend the glorious springlike day with friends in Lake Forest, returning just in time for Mr. De Laitre to board the 11 o'clock train last night to return to Minneapolis.

The wedding on the 30th, which will be attended only by the immediate families and intimate friends, will be followed by a reception at the Casino. Miss Erminger is to have as her two attendants her sister, Miss Bertha Erminger, who is a student this year at Pine Manor, and Miss Eleanor de Laitre, a sister of Mr. De Laitre. Joseph Cotton, who was Mr. De Laitre's roommate at Harvard university, will come from Washington to serve as best man.

The engagement of Miss Erminger and Mr. De Laitre was announced last October. After their marriage they are to make their home in Minneapolis, where Mr. De Laitre is engaged in the practice of law.

Virginia Cross Becomes Bride of New Yorker

The friends whom pretty Virginia Cross made while she was living here last winter with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Leland Cross, will be interested to learn of her marriage last Friday night to Frederick James Walters Jr. of New York. The wedding took place at the residence of the bride's parents in Mount Vernon, N. Y., with only members of the two families there. The bride attended Miss Bennett's school at Millbrook and the Finch school in New York. She became a member of the Service club while living here last winter and took part in "Stepping High," the annual production of that year. Mr. Walters was graduated from Princeton in 1927, and in 1930 he was the national squash and tennis champion, class C. He also is widely known as a golfer.

Sarah May Morey to Wed Daniel Leonard Feb. 3

Miss Sarah May Morey, daughter of the James H. Moreys, and Daniel Leonard, son of John R. Leonard, have set the second date for their wedding for the afternoon of Feb. 3, and are retaining the original plans made when they thought they would be married New Year's day and hold the wedding reception at the Leonard's twenty-third annual New Year's day open house. When the bridegroom was suddenly stricken with pneumonia the wedding was postponed, and now that young Mr. Leonard is convalescing rapidly he and Miss Morey are able to continue with their plans.

Miss Morey had several parties given for her last December, and another one will be given for her one day this week when Mrs. William A. Magie entertains at luncheon. There will be no evening parties to give Mr. Leonard's goodbyes, but the night before the wedding, he and Miss Morey will be married at 4:30 o'clock in Christ church, Winnetka, with its rector, the Rev. E. Ashley Gerhard, officiating, after which they will go south on a winter trip of several weeks. The parties that would have been given before the wedding will be given on their return.

Service Club Makes Nominations Today

The service club members will be out in force this morning for the regular meeting of the club which Mrs. Philip Wright is holding in her apartment at 1500 Lake Shore drive, because the officers and board for 1934-35 are going to be nominated. After the meeting, which starts promptly at 2:30 o'clock, Mrs. Wright is serving tea to her guests.

At 5 o'clock this afternoon Miss Margaret Quan is serving tea and cocktails to the several dozen guests she has invited to a book show for Miss Marguerite Foster, who is to become the bride of Leopold S. Fletcher next Saturday afternoon. The party is to be at the home of Miss Quan's parents, the Thomas Quans, at 23 East Elm street.

Tonight society will have to choose between two musical treats, for Menulhin, the violinist, is playing at the Auditorium, and that lovely opera soprano, "Le Coq d'Or," is being given at the Civic Opera house. The Monday night concert is for the benefit of the Girl Scouts, and as usual there will be a large and fashionable audience at the one tonight to hear "the prodigy of yesterday, the genius of today," as Menulhin is called by some critics. There will be a representative audience at the opera, too, and there are some who will try to visit both the Civic Opera house and the Auditorium, going first to the concert and then to the opera. For "Le Coq d'Or" is to be given following the first act of that old favorite, "Pagliacci."

Italian Night at Opera Tomorrow

Tomorrow is to be Italian night at the opera, with different acts from various Italian operas on the program, and with the construction of the Italian culture. The program of the night, predict that there will not be an unoccupied seat anywhere in the great theater.

Front Views and Profiles By June Provines

MAYBE you won't care for Chinese riddles, but Dr. Bertold Laufer, curator of anthropology at the Field museum and authority on Chinese art, has collected 3,000 riddles of them. He read Partly, some of them at the luncheon of the New Orient society Saturday. This, for instance, was one of them:

"The more you wash it, the dirtier and meaner. Without washing it becomes cleaner."

And the answer to this Chinese riddle, as you probably never could guess, is water.

The light from silver branched candelabra on the tables that lined the long, narrow galleries of the Arts club flickered over the white roses and the narcissi, lit dark reflections in the paintings on the walls, glinted on the silver lace seventeenth century gown of the hostess with its panner skirt and sleeves dripping silver lace. She was Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, and the occasion was her racy costume party. Her hair was silvered, too, and shone softly in the light as she greeted her guests. Vladimir Horowitz came to Orchestra hall yesterday afternoon and demonstrated all over again that when it comes to stimulating piano playing he is in the first flight of artists. No question about it, when he seats himself in front of a piano keyboard he starts to go places, and he takes his audience with him.

Possessed though he may be of about as fine and brilliant a technical equipment as you will find anywhere today, he cares only slightly about putting his dependence upon it. He would seem to prefer to follow a line of beauty, for which his sense is about as unerring as his execution. The Brahms Intermezzo out of opus 119 was on his list yesterday, by no means a rarely heard piece, but seldom if ever so charmingly played. The same is true of his dealings with the Chopin Mazurkas.

On his proper occasion, it is true, he can crash into such works as the Chopin Etude in A minor from opus 25, or even such noisy and pompous iterations of the obvious as the Liszt Sonata "Après une Lecture de Dante," and makes the walls resound with the glories of technical display. But usually he seeks music rather than show-off. Four Bach-Buoni Choralles and the Beethoven Sonata, opus 81, were also on his program; likewise a Debussy group and the "Dance Russe" from Stravinsky's "Petrouchka."

The Chicago pianist, Sidney Silber, began his program in Curtis hall yesterday afternoon with a hitherto unknown work, a set of variations on Balkan themes by Mrs. H. H. A. Beach. It was an interesting work, incidentally a well played one, making the audience feel that the purpose of the set of variations, but of fear. It begins with a presentation in almost ecclesiastical harmonization, develops the theme in several contrasting but generally musical manners, then, one by one, brings in the other three. The general effect is of dignity and slow moving forcefulness.

Mr. Silber also played a group by Debussy and one by Liszt, which because of other assignments could not be heard.

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

Randall Productions Inc., the new firm that has sprung up to revive the drooping drama at the Studebaker theater, is a lively concern which apparently believes in keeping the wheels going around. "Elizabeth Sleeps Out," which it launched last night, is its second play in the last eight days. ["Autumn Crocus" was the first.] Such fecundity is surprising in view of the fact that the stage of late has seemed to have passed into its sterile old age.

This premiere placed on view, for the second time within the memory of comparatively young playgoers, a comedy of farcical bent which was written by Leslie Howard before he became a celebrity. About ten years ago it had a brief engagement in the Princess theater, with a first rate cast, under the title of "Murray Hill." Its present title represents a concession to the taste of the stock company audiences that continued to admire it after its short life in the major theatrical league had ended.

"Elizabeth Sleeps Out" is the type of play that definitely belongs in the catalog of the minor stock companies. It is plainly earmarked for the easy laughter which still regard the standard situations of Victorian farce as provocations of high glee. Its plot is based upon the idea that an undertaker's assistant can pass himself off on the family of the late lamented as a long lost cousin; and its humor is mainly contributed by character who balances a comic jag through three acts.

A theatergoer of the rising generation, young enough to observe the stage with a fresh eye and to ask embarrassing but pertinent questions, recently asked me, when he seats himself in front of a piano keyboard he starts to go places, and he takes his audience with him.

"Because they are supposed to be funny," I supposed.

"Well," she announced with an air of finality, "I'm sick of them."

I submit this bit of evidence to the minds that are now at work in the legitimate theater—if they are minds—and pass on to the drunkard in "Elizabeth Sleeps Out." He is an engaging fellow in spite of his chronic inebriety, and he represents the care-free and reckless manners of Chicago, disturbing the traditions of New York's last refuge of old fashioned gentility the Murray Hill district.

It is supposed to be a Chicago architect who rides horses down Michigan avenue garbed only in underclothing; who gets thrown out of a chorus girl's room in the Drake hotel, and who is found asleep and snored in the bathtub of a lady to whom he had never been introduced. [All this in retrospect.] As acted by Robert Brister he was the source of much amusement among the first nighters.

Carrie Reynolds appears as the most active and sportive of three veteran spinsters in a Murray Hill family; Margaret Fitch plays a young niece who is rescued from the ancestral fate [lifelong virginity] by a romantic young undertaker; Philip Dakin is plausible as that improbable youth.

The cast entirely misses the Murray Hill atmosphere that was the chief charm of the original production, but finds all of the stock company laughs that cluster about the farcical skeleton of the plot. So let us announce that "Elizabeth Sleeps Out" is something that may be seen without any strong surge of playgoing admiration, but also with the relief of an occasional chuckle.

Debutantes Wearing Little Kid Rompers on Florida Beaches

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Baby clothes are the latest wrinkle in beach apparel.

Debutantes are adopting the style favored by the well dressed two year olds this season, with an epidemic of gingham baby rompers and hand knit baby pants.

The rompers have bib fronts, halter necks, brief bloomer legs and, of course, are backless. The others are worn as shorts for bicycling or swimming, with striped mallet or handkerchief tops.

Hand Weaving Takes the Town; Looms on Sale

All Ages Can Enjoy New Home Industry.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

The gentle, industrious art of weaving has taken the town . . . every one is busily occupied with patterns, colors and practically anything and everything as a medium from carpet warp, twine and yarn to your old silk stockings that have been slashed to ribbons. Every one is weaving, from the serious little shut-ins to the sophisticated trying out some and new ideas in scarfs or handbags to cocktail napkins.

The first step is the hand loom, a copy of what the famous Norwegian weavers used, and use to this day a very light affair that can be balanced in a convalescent bed or in the warmest corner by the fire. Minute directions are supplied and free instruction is offered in the shops where you will buy the loom. The experts will show you all the fun and give

You a good start on a new luncheon set or a set of napkins or a knitting bag. You can weave a stunning scarf in no time at all if you are without interruption . . . you can moor your liveliest children indoors on the rainy afternoons and keep them more contented, for it is so beautifully simple that any child can operate the thing and produce some knockout bits of original weaving.

The yarn scarfs in three color combinations are effective, using navy blue, scarlet and ivory, three shades of green or orange, or beige and dull blue . . . you can streak the colors horizontally or march them side by side down the entire length of the long neck scarf. They all have that smart hand woven texture that cannot be duplicated by a machine. The knitting bags and smarter, though smaller envelope bags, are more than easy and can be made in a jiffy. The charm of this miniature hand loom is the speed with which you can toss off a scarf, bag, hat or table mats and the grand assortment of yarns, string and cotton or wool that you may decide to use.

'Worst Woman in Paris' Is Not a Naughty One

a Deceptive One.

"THE WORST WOMAN IN PARIS."

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!
The title implies that this is a naughty, naughty movie. Flew up such a deceptive label! Joan of Arc—in a lot of ways—really hadn't much on "the worst woman in Paris." Now see if you don't agree! The heroine is misunderstood. She is libeled, AND—proves herself capable of heroism, devotion, self-sacrifice and smiling resignation. A heroine indeed! But, all the while, the world points a finger of scorn and cries scornfully, "Aha!" and "O ho!"

Peggy Vane, an American one time art student, is the possessor of such charm that men have gone mad, and broke and ga because of her. Stories about her have been splashed all over the sensational Sunday supplements.

When the picture opens Peggy is the constant companion of Adolph Ballou, a French man about town, and both he and she are bored with life—and each other . . .

Almost simultaneously they decide to call it a day. Peggy, accompanied by her volatile French maid, departs for America.

A train wreck precipitates the two women into the heart of small town life. As a guest in a simple, hospitable home, Peggy falls in love with the son of the sweet old lady who has lovingly nursed her through illness following the accident, at which time Peggy proves herself fairly bristling with the stuff that heroes are made of. John Strong is head of the local high school—and a college job beckons him from a nearby locality. AND his wistful blonde secretary is in love with him . . .

The romance which follows between the fascinating stranger and Strong is nipped in the bud by the lady herself. Peggy is a wise woman in her day and generation . . .

Back to Paris she, her maid and her jewels to Adolph, who has lost everything and is now a mere clerk in the establishment of which he had been head . . .

The ending of the picture is not unlike its beginning.

The various scenes are nicely handled by the portrayers. Benita Hume is decorative. She has poise, warmth and intelligence.

Direction and photography are creditable and the story, none too believable, is fairly interesting.

THE WILD BIRD

SYNOPSIS

Barbara Duncan, aged 20, is completely dominated by an aging, though jealous, father who is against every modern idea and improvement. Her home, in the prime and proper village of Oxbridge, a place of industrial splendor, Barbara seems predestined to join the ranks of the village spinners. She contemplates rebellion. Gregory Rance, popular novelist, is visiting her cousin, Laurie, who is actually a friend. Barbara overheard Rance talking about her. He says she is the sort of girl he'd want to marry. Laurie leaves and Barbara makes her presence known to Rance.

INSTALLMENT VII
A WOMAN PROPOSES

At this unexpected apparition of Barbara, Rance, though momentarily startled, quickly recovered his equanimity.

"Hello," he exclaimed; "here's a queer situation!"

The young girl had halted at the gate with the dark shadows of the woods behind her so that the outline of her figure was blended in the obscurity and only the face stood out. He came near her slowly and rested his arms on the fence between them.

"How long have you been here?"

"A long while."

"Well then—you know a good deal about me."

"I understood you—better than Laurie."

"Without resentment?"

"Don't apologize," she said impatiently. "It doesn't sound like you."

He laughed.

"What I meant what I said and every word of it."

"That's why I want to talk to you." Though the impulse which had sent her to him was one of daring, she hesitated, feeling the need of justification.

"You will go away and it is improbable I shall see you again. I can talk to you as I can to no one else—impersonally."

He nodded and was silent, seeking rapidly in his imagination to divine the impulses which must have awayed her to an act so foreign to her tradition.

"Don't mind my smoking?"

"Please."

He lit a match and held it between them. Her deep eyes deeper and darker than ever were tensely fixed on him and did not waver.

"Go on now."

"It's true; all that Laurie said and more. I am a prisoner and I can't see any escape. What am I going to do? I don't have to explain things to you. I want to marry. I want to have a home. I want my children. I don't want to pass through life and know old and ugly and have no meaning to it. I want to mean for that."

"Did you feel all you said about me?" she blurted out.

"You weren't born an old maid," he said thoughtfully.

She shuddered.

"No, no, no," she cried passionately. "Mr. Rance, you look into things and understand. You see that's wrong and unjust. Is there anything more about the position of a woman—for I'm not a girl, I'm a woman of twenty-two—who feels just as strongly as a man feels, who wants life, who wants to count for something, who knows how much she has to give, and has to sit and wait and fade away."

"Why do you?"

She dropped her hand.

"You know—you've written it. I'm caught. We can't fight against those who love us."

"No one has a superior right to stamp out another human being," he said harshly.

She brushed a wisp of hair from her forehead and leaned her hand against her temple, looking beyond him.

"I'm desperate. I'm beginning to feel defeated and if I feel that way—"

"Let me ask you some questions?"

"Anything. Ask. But first," she said, catching herself up, "you must understand my father. No one else thinks him capable of real feeling. How little they know him! He is the kindest, most generous, most considerate person in the world. As for sentiment—"

"Really?"

"Why he's the most sentimental person you can imagine—only it is all turned in on me! I am the world; the reason for his existing. Why the keepers he's kept of my childhood are so absurd you'd laugh if I told you. My first baby shoes—my first short dress, yes really. He's even pensioned off an old trained nurse who saved my life when I had pneumonia and he thinks I don't know it. To this day he won't allow any one else to come into my room in the morning and open the curtains and the last thing at night he stops at my bed. Often when it has turned cold he'll come into my room and draw the comforter over me. You can't tell things like that. They sound ridiculous—but how can you fight against them? I'm the only solitary thing he cares about in life. It's all shut in, he can't express it. He's afraid to show it. But I know it. He loves me."

"And you too?" You do love him?"

"Will any one else ever love me like that?"

"Have you ever gone to him and talked to him as you are talking to me?"

"I've tried—I've always failed! I've been trying to get up the courage for years. He's turned to him and the thin sinuous mouth twisted in a haunting smile. 'I'm not really like this you know. I'm all shut in myself. I can't express what I feel—at least before now. I'm like him.'"

"No, that's not true."

"Well, then I've become a reflection of him, because I'm dominated. You can't imagine how I've been dominated. I never went to boarding school. I never visit any one. My father hasn't the slightest idea what I really am thinking. He's tried to impose every idea on me. He's suppressed every real feeling in me. He's made me feel like this is the most incredible thing I've ever dared to do. Mr. Rance, please help me. I am desperate."

"What a pity," he said, moved at the thought of so much sensitiveness and feeling doomed to have lived in vain.

"But is there no escape?"

"You will never break away yourself," he said, shaking his head.

"You think so too?"

"Because of his weakness, not his strength. It's hard for you to hurt any one."

"Yes, that is true—but then?"

"But you—have you never been in love?"

"She thought over her answer a moment, searching his face.

"I've tried to be. Do you understand?"

He nodded.

There was a mounting constraint which each felt. They started to speak at the same moment, stopped and became silent again.

"Barbara," he said abruptly, "why do you tell me only half of what is in your mind?"

"Will you think me absolutely crazy?"

"No. Only the obvious things in life don't happen."

Her fingers locked.

"Did you feel all you said about me?" she blurted out.

"Yes, I did."

"Well, why don't you marry me?" She raised a hand quickly. "No, wait. Don't say anything. I'm frightened to death as it is. But you're the one person in the world who might understand. Listen. I have my own income. I shall always be able to take care of myself. Some day I shall have a great deal. That may open new opportunities to you, or it may not. It's your right to have the power it might give you. If you take me, I am your woman. I shall have no other idea before me. You can be selfish, ruthless, domineering. I won't have you otherwise. If I fit into your life, if I am necessary to you, keep me. If I ever stop you from doing what you want, leave me. It will be my fault. Now will you—can you understand?"

She stopped amazed at what she had dared, staring at him in a sudden terrified realization.

Rance (though he had suspected the denouncement) was too astonished by the desperate veracity of her plea to answer immediately.

"Is this to be a reasoned choice, Barbara?"

She shook her head. Her hand against her throat.

Childlessness Often Means an Empty LifeBitter Loneliness May Be Price of Freedom.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

Many of the human documents that come to this department I may not print even with names and events changed a little, since the writers request me not to. Often I regret this because the letters would have value if passed on to others.

Not long ago a letter came in asking for the names of child adoption and boarding out agencies. The writer whom I may quote, went on to say:

"I wonder if childless people are not afflicted with a fear of responsibility, that originally was the cause for their childless state. I know that has been my own case."

"Now at fifty the world is empty, and a craving, almost to desperation demands children. It may be smart to fool nature, but how she does demand the ounce of blood back in longing and regret. A twenty year old boy, in his youth and strength and joy of life, actually sickens me with the thought of what might have been mine."

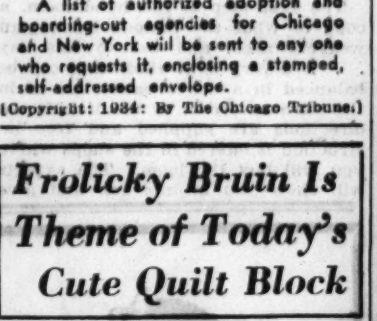

"I chose between a job and a family. Now the job is no more and the family is not, and the future has few new interests. For five years I have filled the gap by taking into my home whatever children I could pick up from families who could be benefited."

"One winter for the school year I had five, ranging from nine to nineteen. But none have come to stay more than two years. The separations in each case are painful to me. The children do not mind. Nature has provided them with ability to accept any change as an adventure. Now I am all out of children and the relief in helping proper families better than I can. I also want, or hope to find, two boys who may become a permanent interest in my home. I have just begun this search. Wish me luck, for I have a home that's lonely."

I don't believe everybody wants children. But sometimes people just put off having children for a while and live to regret."

A list of authorized adoption and boarding out agencies for Chicago and New York will be sent to any one who requests it, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

NEPAL BLAMES BRITISH AIRMEN FOR EARTHQUAKE

Claim Flight Over Everest Angered Gods.

NEW DELHI, India, Jan. 21.—(AP)—From the mysterious Himalayan kingdom of Nepal today came a new explanation of the earthquake which a week ago shook all India, causing deaths unofficially estimated at 15,000 to 20,000.

From the tiger shooting camp of the maharajah of Nepal, 850 miles west of Katmandu, the capital, came word that followers of the maharajah blamed the recent successful flight of three British aviators over Mount Everest for the catastrophe.

The reports to declare that the gods of the world's highest mountain, previously unconquered by man, had by the earthquake visitation wreaked vengeance upon humanity for invading their precincts.

Heavy Loss of Life.

They pointed out, it was said, that the axis of the severest shocks closely followed the line of flight taken by the aviators. The Marquis of Clydesdale, Col. L. V. Stewart Blucher and Flight Lieutenant E. F. McIntyre, who crossed Everest's peak, 29,000 feet high, last April.

At the same time, couriers from the maharajah's camp brought word of heavy loss of life at Katmandu, the Nepal capital, from the earthquake.

The maharajah was reported to be hurrying back to Katmandu. The actual extent of the damages was not learned.

It was recalled that the British expedition had some difficulty with the Nepal government regarding their plans to fly over Everest, and the London Daily Mail's correspondent at Purneah wired his paper that the government was seriously annoyed because a plane flew over Nepalese territory without authority.

Opposed Airmen's Flight.

Another correspondent at Kalimpong said it was virtually certain a hitch had occurred over the expedition's request for permission to fly more than once over Nepal. The Nepalese already had refused permission to establish an advance airbase at Katmandu.

The two planes in the Marquis of Clydesdale's expedition climbed to 25,000 feet before crossing Mount Everest. The takeoff was made from Lalabu, seven miles north of Purneah, Bengal.

Nine men are known to have lost their lives attempting to scale Mount Everest on foot, and although a point has been reached scarcely a mile from the summit, no man has yet stood upon the topmost level.

INSURGENT G. O. P. FACTION ADDS 3 NAMES TO SLATE

Republican committeemen of twenty wards, a group not in harmony with the "harmony program" of the Republican county central committee, met again yesterday and added three names to their slate of candidates for the April primary. This group is led by George F. Barrett, a former judge, and has the support of former State's Attorney Crowe, with Aid. William P. Pacelli of the Twentieth ward as one of its chiefs.

Former Judge Barrett was selected by this caucus to be the candidate for assessor. Patrick Sheridan Smith, former city clerk, was named for sheriff, and William J. Balmer, former commissioner of public service, for the post of clerk of the Criminal court. Previously the committeemen agreed to support the candidacy of former Aid. Arthur F. Albert for president of the county board.

An opposition slate of candidates is expected to be filed by the county committee group headed by County Chairman William H. Weber and Secretary Edward F. McLaughlin. Barrett-Crowe-Pacelli Republicans expect to complete their slate today.

N. H. WENDELL AND NEW YORK ACTRESS MARRY

Miss Dorothy Day, New York actress, and Nathan Howard Wendell Jr., Chicago banker, were married Saturday in the county building by Judge Eugene Holland, friends learned last night. Mr. Wendell is 32 years old and his bride is 35. They will live at the Knickerbocker hotel.

Mr. Wendell, a former vice president of the old National Bank of the Republic, is at present a director of the closed bank section of the EFC.

Miss Day is the daughter of Mrs. R. B. Ettinger, 321 West 59th street, New York City. Last April she obtained a divorce from Gilbert Eggert Broking, New York broker, on charges of desertion. They had married in May, 1929. Miss Day has appeared in many plays, among them "Counselor at Law" and "Fifty Million Frenchmen."

20 LEADERS IN U. S. VICTIMS OF STATUE SUBSCRIPTION FRAUD

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Federal authorities today disclosed that more than 20 prominent men had been bilked of small sums in a racket that had capitalized the names of Gen. John J. Pershing and Maj. Gen. George C. Squire, both retired.

Police arrested Alfred M. Layton of Washington, identified as a chief of the Better Housing Institute, who was reported by them to be the author of the scheme.

Leo A. Rover, United States district attorney here, said the action had been taken upon receipt of information that Layton had written more than 15,000 letters to prominent men asking contributions for a bust of Gen. Pershing.

Those listed in official records as having been bilked of contributions to the fund were said to have received a letter upon which the signature of Gen. Squire was used by Layton without authority.

Among them were Charles G. Dawes, former vice president; W. W. Atterbury, railroad executive; Paul D. Cravath, New York business man; Daniel Williams, railroad president; S. Parker Gilbert, internationally known business man; William Randolph Hearst, newspaper publisher; Andrew W. Mellon, former secretary of the treasury; Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the New York Times; E. L. Cord, Le Roy W. Baldwin, Alfred P. Sloan Jr., Ogden L. Mills, George Gordon Battle, George W. Wickersham, Harry Harkness Flagler, Nathan L. Miller, James W. Wadsworth Jr., John N. Willys, James T. Loree, Roger W. Straus, and Adolph Lewisohn.

Rover said Gen. Squire was one of the principal complainants in the case. Squire asserted that Layton had executed his signature to 15,000 letters without his knowledge or consent, Rover said.

CAROL REBELS AT ORDER TO BREAK UP HIS CAMARILLA

Rumanian King Loyal to Mme. Lupescu.

(Copyright, 1934, by the New York Times.)
BUCHAREST, Rumania, Jan. 21.—"Not even the Hohenzollern head of my house ventured to ask so much from me," was King Carol's comment on Nicholas Titulescu's recent demand, on returning to Rumania, for the removal of six leading members of the court camarilla, including Mme. Magda Lupescu, from the king's entourage.

To this Titulescu, now foreign minister, is said to have replied, "They are the demands of France."

These demands are not wholly satisfied. Titulescu's desire to obtain their fulfillment is going to be the keynote of Rumanian affairs in the next few weeks.

King Changes Mind.

Titulescu, after visiting the king, returned to Bucharest with the assurance that all his demands except to Mme. Lupescu would be granted. It was announced that five members of the Camarilla were going.

The following day, however, King Carol summoned George Tatarescu and Gen. Paul Angelescu, now ministers of munitions, to Sinala. From them he got assurances that changed his attitude. He entrusted Tatarescu with the formation of a cabinet and told Titulescu that only two members of the camarilla—his secretary, Dinu Dumitrescu, and the latter's father, Gen. Dumitrescu, commandant of the gendarmerie—would be removed. Unable to obtain more, Tatarescu then took the oath again as foreign minister.

King's Hint Ignored.

The king's clear hint that he wanted Tatarescu to lead the Liberals was not taken, however, and Dinu Bratianu immediately was elected. Bratianu is the leader of the old fashioned Liberals, while Tatarescu is the hope of the younger members, on whom Carol is relying to prove a counter-attraction for the youth of the country to Zelea Codreanu's anti-semitic iron guard.

When parliament opens on Feb. 1, Titulescu will be found lined up with the old Liberals. Despite the party's huge electoral success and outward harmony the underlying split between the young and old Liberals makes the government's position precarious.

Titulescu intends to have Tatarescu govern for a few months while his plans for a cabinet headed by Dinu Bratianu are perfected. King Carol, however, has never forgiven Bratianu for his part in exiling him.

CUBAN PRESIDENT ORDERS REVOLT PLOTTER JAILED

Ousted Member of Cabinet Behind Movement.

BY GUSTAVO RENO.

HAVANA, Jan. 21.—President Carlos Menéndez tonight ordered the arrest of Antonio Guiteras, former secretary of interior, and radical leftist. He will be charged with conspiring to overthrow the government through an uprising of soldiers and laborers.

Guiteras' whereabouts have been known to the police since former President Ramon Grau San Martín's administration was ousted. It is reliably reported that he is in Holguin, Oriente province, where he is heading a large group of conspirators. Foreign communist workers and soldiers who have deserted from Col. Fulgencio Batista's army are supporting Guiteras. According to President Menéndez, Guiteras seeks to assume the presidency, depose Batista and establish a farmers' and workers' regime supported by communist troops.

General Strike Called.

Guiteras' spokesmen announced that the National Labor federation and the National Labor confederation which control labor throughout Cuba, are ready to support Guiteras. The National Labor confederation is affiliated with the communist party. A general strike aimed to paralyze business and public utility services, has been called for next week, according to the police. Secret documents were confiscated today in a raid on both labor organizations' headquarters here.

Meanwhile, Menéndez announced he had signed a decree reestablishing the war and navy department Grau abolished. Batista will receive the secretaryship. He also will act as the army's chief of staff.

Upon assuming office Batista will start a complete reorganization of the army and navy. He will be assisted by American army commissions whose services will be requested from President Roosevelt as soon as the United States recognizes the Menéndez government. The shakeup features the discharge and prosecution of soldiers "stained with former President Gerardo Machado's crimes and blood."

Menéndez has declared over half of the 10,000 soldiers are subject to dishonorable discharge or punishment. Batista today released 50 former army and naval officers from Cabana and Principe military fortresses. None will return to military service.

Backs "Top Sergeants."

Before assuming the presidency, Menéndez promised Batista he would respect the top sergeants who had been promoted to officers after the army revolt.

Joaquín Martínez Saenz, leader of the ABC revolutionary society, returned to Havana from the United States today. He was greeted by more than 5,000 ABC members who escorted him to the presidential palace. Martínez Saenz will take up his duties as secretary of the treasury where he left off at the time of the fall of the government of Carlos Manuel de Cespedes.

After being embraced by Menéndez, the ABC leader announced he will seek from President Roosevelt an annual allotment of 2,000,000 tons of Cuban sugar as well as a reduction of the existing 2 cent tariff. The treasury chief also declared he intends to seek a $25,000,000 loan in the United States to be used for Cuba's rehabilitation.

CHILE PLEASED
POLICY IN CUBA

SANTIAGO, Chile, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The government-owned newspaper, Nacion, today expressed admiration for the Cuban policy of President Roosevelt.

Despite attacks from Caribbean delegates at Montevideo, the newspaper said, Secretary of State Hull of the United States succeeded in carrying "the Rooseveltian atmosphere of the new international policy of the good neighbor" to Latin-Americans, convincing them the present course is not linked with the past.

"Culmination of Cuban events with the rise to power of a new president accentuates the North American attitude often repeated by President Roosevelt and Mr. Hull, of nonintervention and the right of each state to legislate in its own interests," the editorial said.

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Staving off a fourth period threat, Chicago's National Professional champion Bears demonstrated their class today by defeating an aggregation of Pacific coast stars, 21 to 7, before a crowd of 35,000 in a football game sponsored by the Knights of Columbus for charity.

thrilled at the more open style of play practiced in pro ranks.

Coast Ahead in First Downs.
Although the Bears only made six first downs to twelve counted by their opponents, the Chicago team amazed yesterday when it counted most. The Bears scored in the first, third, and fourth periods. The Pacific coast eleven made its touchdown in the second period.

At the end of the half the two teams were tied, 7 to 7, but with the starting gun for the third period Left Half Back Cliff Battles, drafted from the Boston Redskins for the current tour, provided a spark the Bears seemed to lack up to that point.

Alternately passing and running for substantial gains, Battles led his teammates in a pair of sustained drives that netted touchdowns in each of the

Ronzani and Hewitt crossed the goal line, but it was the tricky feet and the accurate throwing arm of Battles, that put both of them in position to score.

He Can Punt, Too.
Just to demonstrate that he was a real triple threat, Battles interspersed his other work with a pair of punts that brought cheers from the crowd, one going 40 yards for a net gain of 55, and the other going 53 yards for a net gain of 48.

The Bears' first touchdown came when Battles went over center for a yard and one-half with a minute to go in the first quarter after Ronzani's pass of 36 yards put the Bears in the most advantageous position they were able to achieve at any time during the first half. Manders kicked the goal.

Presnell Ties Score.
The second period was five minutes old when the Pacific All-Stars tied the score. Presnell and Max Krause, former Gonzaga half back, led the western eleven in a sustained advance which began at their own 40 yard line.
Pounding off tackle and around the ends, Presnell and Krause advanced the ball to the Bears' 10 yard line. At that point Presnell failed to find the hole he expected at right guard, so he stepped around right end for the ten yards necessary to make the touchdown. Presnell then kicked the extra point, knotting the score at 7-7.

Ronzani tossed a pass to Battles which netted 38 yards and put the ball on the Pacific Coast team's 5 yard line.
In two plays, Ronzani took it over for the Bears' second touchdown and Manders kicked goal.

Battles Intercepts Pass.
It was enough to win the game but the Bears came back in the fourth period with another counter so there wouldn't be any question about their superiority. Here again, Battles displayed his mettle.

The Pacific Coast squad was driving down the field in a sustained attack that seemed certain to eventuate in the tying touchdown for the second time but Battles nullified the attack by intercepting a forward pass hurled by Presnell on the Bears' 30 yard line.
Battles ran back eleven yards to the Bears' 41 yard stripe before he was downed.

Jack Manders made 2 yards at 4 left end. Randers picked up 4 more yards at right guard and then started a double lateral which John Sisk of Marquette took to the 21 yard line.

Hewitt Grabs Pass.
From that point Grange passed to Sisk for 12 yards and his center twice for a gain of 4 more, putting the ball on the Pacific 5 yard line. Grange then faded back and tossed a forward pass across the goal line to Bill Hewitt which Hewitt scooped off his shoe.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The Blackhawks, back on their beloved Stadium ice after a week of anguish and humiliation abroad, tied the Montreal Maroons, 2 to 2, last night to go into a triple tie with the New York Rangers and Detroit for leadership in the United States division of the National Hockey League.

A tie for first place may seem good enough on the face of it, but most of th 10,000 who saw the contest had figured the Hawks were in undisputed possession of the top berth in their division when they went into the final period with a 2 to 0 lead.

Bye, Bye, Ball Game.

In 50 seconds of the third period half of that 3 to 0 Hawk lead had disappeared on a solo effort by Jimmy Ward, and less than three minutes later they had blown the rest of the lead, giving them the unenviable record of tossing off two 2-0 leads in two successive nights.

In the first period the Hawks skated brilliantly and showed no tendency to establish the train-wreck alibi so familiar in hockey circles when a team is asked to play two nights in succession in different cities. If anything they were faster than they were after resting a full week earlier this month.

They Were Only Fooling.

The Hawks' willingness to forget their train ride was first rewarded in five minutes of the first period when Johnny Gotsdell scored on a beautiful six-yard demonstration after Lionel Conacher's pass had gone back to the nets. The other Chicago goal was produced in 12:15 of the first period by Doc Romnes as the climax of a mildly precipitated when Mush March's shot hit the goal post and bounced in front of the cage. March and Paul Tompon were credited with assists on Romnes' production.

Both outfits played good, aggressive hockey during the second period, which was a scoreless standoff in which each goal made 10 saves.

It's A Sad Story, Mates.

Then the aforesaid turning on of the heat by Ward and Smith at the outset of the third period. The period opened with Gotsdell and Jenkins of the Hawks and Northcott of the Maroons in the penalty box.

The Maroons moved into the Hawk defense zone with their one man advantage and when Gotsdell served him they decided to stay up, even though the teams then were even-handed. After a bit of bouncing around, the puck stopped free directly in front of the cage, about half way between the blue line and the goal line. Ward grabbed it, charged at Gardner, feinted a bit, then beat
Gardner with a well-aimed shot.

3:25 of the third period when left-handed Mr. Gardner tried in vain to catch Smith's high shot with his right

GOLDEN GLOVES REPORT TONIGHT FOR EXAMINATION

200 Asked to Appear with First Group.

Tonight the first of the series of physical examinations for Golden Gloves boxers will be held at George Trifton's gymnasium, 180 West Randolph street. Two hundred boys have been asked to report. The examinations will continue tomorrow and Wednesday nights.

All boxers, who have been notified by mail, must report on the night to which they have been assigned, between 6:30 and 8:30 p. m. Registration clerks of the Central association of the A. A. U., under direction of Capt. Roy E. Davis, will be present. The A. A. U. has sanctioned the Golden Gloves amateur boxing tournaments.

Novice Fees Will Be Paid. Registration in the novice class for the duration of the tournament costs 25 cents. This fee will be paid by Trifton's. Registration in the Open division, from which will be selected the boys who will oppose the out of town contestants in the Tournament of Champions, Feb. 26, 27, and 28 at the Chicago Stadium, costs $1 and is good for one year. Cards will be issued tonight.

A corps of physicians under the direction of Dr. Thomas Dwyer will examine all contestants. A second examination will also be made on the nights the sectional meets are held. All boys reporting for physical examinations must bring parental consent cards which have been mailed to them.

300 Other Entries Received. While only 600 boys have been called for examination this week, more than 300 other entries now are in the hands of the tournament officials. Letters will be mailed to them within a few days.

Boys who report tonight will receive (1) two tickets of admission to the sectional tournament in which they will fight; (2) general instruction letters; and (3) referee instructions.

Ralph Plattman, one of Chicago's best flyweights, has luck will change. In 1932 I made the South section team but spent the nights of the Stadium fights in bed with the flu. Last year, representing the Far South section, I met Johnny Baltzer in my first fight. Baltzer is the best counter puncher at his weight and I learned this too late. 'This year I hope to win a diamond studded golden glove.'

Johnny Baltzer won the 1933 flyweight title. Another of last year's crop of flyweights, Walter Mathys, of St. Charles, Ill., is competing in the 118 pound class in the Joliet sectional. If he wins there he'll fight in the Tournament of Champions.

Alfred Oaklander, who finished second in the intermediate Silver States Derby in 1931, won by Ed Stundl, has entered Golden Gloves. Oaklander took the lap prize in the Derby and hopes to add a golden glove to his collection of medals.

St. Philip High school, which has entered a team in Golden Gloves, has a splendid boxing record. Last year St. Philip won 14 meets, including a victory over Northwestern university boxers. The high school also won nine out of 10 all-Catholic and City high school boxing championships. The record this year includes five victories in six. Our Lady of Sorrows C. Y. O. team won from St. Philip but was defeated three times in return matches. Phil Kennelly, 135 pounds, and Art Poladino, 126 pounds B class, won C. Y. O. championships. Jim Bidwell is the coach.

The St. Philip team follows: Ed Garvey, Andy Scavani, Angelo Di Benedetto, Sol Pavone, Bill Bane, Ed Matthews, Gerald Mathew, Frank Shultz, Tom Kennelly, Walter McKibben, Ralph DeMarco, Jim O'Neil, flyweights; Phil Kennelly, Edward Granahan, lightweight; Pat Sheehy, Bob Timney, featherweight; Ed Keane, Bernie Kulaski, welterweights.

An entry from Joe Conrad, a welterweight, has been received but he neglected to send in his address and unless another entry is made he cannot be notified concerning physical examinations.

Entries for this year's sectionals, which open Feb. 12 at the 1224 Regiment armory with the west side tournament, will close within 10 days. Send in your entries immediately so that physical examinations may be completed.

BEHR, COACH OF GOLDEN GLOVES, ON W-G-N TONIGHT

Johnny Behr, head coach of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE Golden Gloves boxing champions, will give the second of a series of four talks on the benefits of boxing for the average youngster and the proper training routine for the sport at 6:30 o'clock tonight on the W-G-N sports hour conducted by John Harrington.

Swordtail No Fighter, Fish Fancier Finds

BY BOB BECKER.

If owners of small, tropical fish aquariums want to avoid a serious wrestling contest between any of their aquatic pets they had better keep the swordtails (Xiphophorus helleri) and the Jordanella separated. When we were making some changes in our aquariums a few days ago we found it necessary to put a swordtail male in a small tank with two Jordanella for a few minutes. The result was a savage, knock down and drag out scrap between the two species with the swordtail getting well chewed up before we could separate the two opponents.

The Jordanella, a rather handsome chunky little aquarium fish which comes from Florida, is noted for its pugnacious character. We knew that it had a rather cantankerous disposition. However, we weren't expecting a good sized swordtail fish to be whipped by a Jordanella. But before we rescued the poor swordtail he was pretty well battered.

Swordtail Is Live Bearer. The hobby of keeping and raising tropical fish, a sport that has enlisted thousands of new enthusiasts in the last year, has focused considerable attention on the swordtail. It's a live bearer and aquarium owners are quite intrigued by such species which, instead of having eggs like the black bass or walleyed pike in our fresh water lakes, gives birth to live, young fish. As a rule the swordtail will give birth to a brood of forty or fifty babies. We have heard of broods which were much larger, some even running as high as 200 young fish in one brood. But that number is an exception.

Although we have had no trouble in keeping swordtails in a community tank with other species of tropical fish, some of the males develop fighting habits which makes them a menace. These will kill smaller fish or else constantly harass them. Such specimens have to be segregated.

Keep Vegetation in Tank. If an aquarium owner has purchased swordtails with the idea of raising a brood of this species he should make sure that there is plenty of vegetation in the tank so that the babies can hide in it. The swordtail female has a playful habit of turning on her own young and gobbling them up if she can. Of course, one way to thwart this cannibalistic trait of the female swordtail is to place her in a tank by herself. As soon as the young swordtails are born she should be taken out of the tank so there will be no chance for her to eat her young.

Although the swordtail eats some of the algae that an aquarium owner notices develop in his tanks, this species is not predominantly an algae feeder. Therefore the swordtail should always be given some animal food. Dried prepared foods sold in pet stores, daphnia, and living worms make an excellent diet for this species which comes to us from Mexico and Guatemala.

YACHT CLUB TO MEET. The Chicago Motor Yacht club will meet tonight aboard the clubship in Belmont harbor.

Lightweights Supply Week's Ring Interest

New York, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The lightweights hold the center of the boxing stage this week to the almost complete exclusion of the various other classes.

Barney Ross of Chicago, lightweight champion, meets Billy Petrolle from Duluth at the New York Coliseum Wednesday in an overnight match. There is also the delayed return bout between Tony Canzoneri of New York, former lightweight titleholder, and Cleto Locatelli of Italy, who holds the European championship in the division. This is scheduled for Madison Square Garden, New York, Friday. Finally there is Frankie Killek, the Californian, who recently won the rather synthetic junior lightweight title by a surprising technical knockout of K. Chocotea. He meets Frankie Wallace, Cleveland 155 pounder, at Cleveland Monday. The Canzoneri-Locatelli bout is 12 rounds, the others ten.

Ross will have to give away about five pounds to Petrolle in his non-title bout and may find the going a bit tough. The odds side with the titleholder. Canzoneri outpointed Locatelli in the Italian's first bout in the United States, but Cleto made it close enough for them to be rematched. Then Tony was injured and Locatelli allied in the date for their fight by taking a decisive but unimpressive decision from Jack [Kid] Berg. Canzoneri hopes to gain a third title bout with Ross, who deprived him of the championship last year, by whipping Locatelli this week.

The C. Y. O. won the trophy last year.

The Trifton squad is headed by Izzy Goldstein and Charles Cossello in the featherweight class, Art Oliver in the welterweight, and John Milen in the welterweight division. G. Garvey to oppose Goldstein.

In the 1932 tourney the C. Y. O. won the team trophy with 23 points. Trifton's gym was second with 19.

Amelia Summerville Dies
in New York.

New York, Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Amelia Summerville, noted comedienne of the eighties and nineties, who shared honors with Henry E. Dixey in the burlesque, "Adonis," died today at Roosevelt hospital. She was about 70 years old.

Miss Summerville fell on the ice outside her home at the National Bible Institute, in West 55th street, on the evening of Jan. 3, fracturing a hip and dislocating a shoulder. Despite her injuries, she attempted to walk into the institute but collapsed and was taken to Roosevelt hospital by her daughter, Mrs. Grace Spickles, who was with her when she died. Miss Summerville was making favorable progress toward recovery when pneumonia developed last week.

Real Name was Shaw.
Her real name was Amelia M. Shaw and she adopted that of Summerville when she first went on the stage at the age of 17 years. She was born in County Kildare, Ireland, and went to Toronto, Ont., where a child, attending the Phoebe Street school there. One of her earliest appearances was as a silent girl in "The Black Crook," which has been termed the forerunner of the modern musical show. The tights in which members of the chorus were garbed aroused bitter criticism.

Through a coincidence, Mr. Dixey is at present in a critical condition in Bellevue hospital, also as the result of a fall. Miss Summerville was solicitous regarding his recovery and asked concerning him a few hours before her death.

Was Quite Heavy.
"Adonis," ran on Broadway for three solid years and Miss Summerville continued with it when it went to London for a year. In addition to many months on the road, critics hailed her as a sizzling side-splitting comedienne in her role and, despite her 250 pounds, she was considered pretty and winsome.

Miss Summerville felt her weight to be a handicap in the career and resolved to do something about it. She took long walks, sometimes in company with Maurice Barrymore, and was said to be the first woman in New York to "reduce" seriously. She amazed Broadway by taking of 100 pounds which, to the day of her death, she never regained. After "Adonis" gradually faded from the footlights, Miss Summerville created something of a sensation by appearing as a blonde and slender "Trilly," making a pronounced success as De-mourier's pathetic heroine. In 1919 she wrote her first book, "Why Be Fat?" Later she appeared in several motion picture comedies.

Besides her daughter, Mrs. Spickles, Miss Summerville is survived by a sister, Mrs. Frank Stratton. Her husband, Frederick Rummels, an actor, died many years ago.

MCCOOEY DEATH SEEN AS BLOW TO TAMMANY

Heart Fails the Boss of Brooklyn.

New York, Jan. 21.—[Special.]—John H. McCooey, dean of New York City politics and for the last twenty-two years, "boss" of the Kings county Democratic organization, died early today of heart disease. He was 69 years old. He had suffered with myocarditis for two years.

Shortly before his death McCooey had paid a visit to President Roosevelt at the White House. The Farley-McCooey group of Democrats had been in informal and friendly chat with him. Postmaster General James A. Farley, now in New York, was to have conferred with McCooey this afternoon at the Belmont hotel. There was every indication that the veteran Brooklynite had reestablished friendly relations with Farley.

It is now believed that McCooey's successor will be Frank V. Kelly, a close friend. However, the Farley-McCooey group of Democrats may step in and take a hand in Brooklyn, as they have been doing in Manhattan, where they are openly trying to oust John F. Curry from the Tammany leadership.

Passes Through Conflicts.
In the republican campaign between Tammany's John F. O'Brien and the Republican-fusion candidate, Fiorella De La Guardia, Farley's intervention with Joseph V. McKee was regarded as an attack on Tammany by the postmaster general, who also was chairman of the state Democratic party and the national committee. The combined vote of McKee and O'Brien was over a million and was larger than that of De La Guardia, who was elected and now is in office.

McCooey's men were for Alfred E. Smith at the 1928 convention and took a like stand at Chicago in 1932. McCooey was born in 8th street, in the old 16th ward, on the east side of Manhattan, on June 18, 1864. A year later the family moved to Brooklyn, where he spent the rest of his life, except for a brief period during which he lived in Chester, Pa., where his father worked in a shipyard.

When he was 12 years old, his father was killed in an accident, leaving him as the eldest of six children, the responsibility of helping to support the family. He worked in the shipyard for eight years, returning to Brooklyn in 1885 to work for a manufacturing concern. He obtained a job in the Brooklyn navy yard, where he helped construct the casting mold for the stem and stern frames of the battleship Maine, which eleven years later was blown up in Havana harbor.

Public Career Starts.
His public career began on July 10, 1887, when he was appointed superintendent of a postoffice substitution in Brooklyn. On April 13, 1893, he was named assistant postmaster, holding office until Jan. 1, 1898, when he became postmaster of the district. Less than a year later he became assistant secretary of the municipal civil service commission. Mayor George B. McClellan named him a member of the commission in 1904, and he became its president, resigning in October of the same year to accept appointment as deputy collector of assessments in the department of finance.

He was appointed chief clerk of the Kings county court in 1911 at a salary of $9,000. This he held until he was retired on March 1, 1920, on a pension of about $7,000.

Present at his bedside when he died were his entire family—his wife, Mrs. Catherine J. McCooey, two sisters, Mrs. John J. Carr and Miss Margaret J. McCooey, an associate superintendent of schools; his three sons, Supreme Court Justice John J. McCooey Jr., Herbert and Everett McCooey, and his daughter, Mrs. George C. Tully. There will be funeral services Wednesday morning.

WHEAT PIONEER
HEDGE BUYING OF MAY OPTION

Corn Eases Slightly,
Oats Advance.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

A steady run of buying orders for May wheat to remove hedges against sales of wheat and four by cash and futures interests, under way in the local market for several weeks, has resulted in tightening the position in this delivery rather sharply.

With practically no export business in wheat under way except in ear-marked grain from the Pacific coast, the domestic monetary and crop situation consequently becomes of far more importance than any developments in Europe.

According to the department of agriculture the reduction in the winter wheat area was only 77 per cent of what had been anticipated in view of the fact that 80 per cent of farmers had signed up contracts to reduce the area 15 per cent from the three year average.

Southwest Needs Rain.

The blame for the unfavorable showing is laid on the shoulders of farmers who failed to sign contracts. The greatest difference between expected and actual reductions was in Oregon and South Dakota, where spring and winter wheat, respectively, are a considerable extent. The department was of the opinion farmers might have planted winter grain and expected to make the reduction in spring sowings.

Continued dry weather in parts of the southwest is attracting much attention in view of the low condition which was reported in a number of states Dec. 1. Normally a low condition is taken as indicating normal abundance of acreage, and if this proves true this season the trade can look for over 12 per cent of the 41,000,000 acres seeded last year being plowed up.

This is the third year of drought in parts of the belt, and at the close of the last week some of the closest observers of weather and crop conditions believed a relatively small crop would again be harvested in 1934.

Price Range Narrow.

Wheat prices held within narrow limits last week, although good buying developed on all the minor grades. Final prices Saturday represented net gains of 1/2 to 1 cent for the week, with May at 90 1/2 to 90 3/4 cents, July, 88 1/2 to 88 3/4 cents, and September, 87 1/2 to 87 3/4 cents. Oats Trade Light.

So far the anticipated shortage in supplies of oats has not developed and the heavy undertone in corn has chilled bullish enthusiasm regarding the former grain. A fairly good export business developed in the last few days in domestic grain. Closing sales Saturday showed gains of 1/2 to 1 1/2 cents for the week, with May at 28 1/2 to 28 3/4 cents, July at 27 1/2 to 27 3/4 cents, and September at 26 1/2 to 26 3/4 cents. Home Loan Bank System Possesses 2,065 Members

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(AP)—The Federal Home Loan Bank board said today that at the close of 1933 the home loan bank system had 2,065 member institutions, with total resources of $2,600,000,000, or 34 per cent of the assets of all building and loan associations in the country.

Outlines Plan for Chicago
Rail Changes

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(AP)—A general consolidation of city ticket offices, passenger and freight facilities of railroads operating in the western region was discussed in the recent report made by Joseph B. Eastman, federal coordinator of transportation to congress and President Roosevelt.

Thus far, Eastman said, no complaints on the changes made or contemplated in the region embracing Chicago, Kansas City, Omaha, Twin Cities and Twin Ports terminals have been received.

"The Chicago terminal," the report stated, "being the largest and most intricate railway terminal in the world, presents a most complicated situation and at the same time great potential opportunities for economy."

A report has been completed for Omaha, and one is approaching completion at Kansas City. A report has been rejected, and is being reworked on an entirely different basis at Twin Cities. The work is well along at Chicago.

Categorically, the major projects undertaken were:

1.—Surveys at Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, Twin Cities and Twin Ports. Also at active smaller terminals involving two or more lines, where the possibilities are not so large.

Passenger Pooling Plan.

2.—Consideration of pooling passenger services between Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, and the Twin Cities. It is expected to project the study into the southwest from Kansas City, Omaha and Denver, and from the Twin Cities to the Pacific coast.

Pooling of freight service. This was deferred on merchandise traffic out of Chicago and St. Louis, and livestock and packing house products from primary markets to Chicago.

A study is being made of pooling of joint use of branch lines with a view to extending existing lines and of one line and possible reduction of operating expenses.

A committee of traffic vice presidents is studying recommendations concerning a proposed movement of cars or railroads to be reduced through rates from originating areas to primary markets, together with a system of rates therefore which will not greatly disturb the present rates.

The idea is to enable the carriers to compete more effectively with water transportation.

Chicago Roads Involved.

6.—Upon completion of the terminal study and submission of report, the Chicago, Omaha and Council Bluffs, it is thought that it may be possible to effectuate a practical demonstration of what can be done by putting the suggested arrangement into effect. This will involve displacement of 354 employees.

A study has been projected on the Chicago and North Western Railway and Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railway for coordinating facilities and operations at all common points. Pooling services and traffic between such points.

Elimination of competitive city ticket offices and possible substitution thereof of central offices, with branch offices in connection with the Western Union Telegraph company, the Bell Telephone company, and other widely increasing sales possibilities.

STOCKS CLIMB
HELPS POSITION

Traders See Fiscal Policy Bullish.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 21.—Bullish signals are flying above the stock exchange once more thanks to President Roosevelt's long awaited explanation of his fiscal policy as contained in his message to congress last Monday.

The CHICAGO TRIBUNE's combined market average gained 6.83 last week, the largest jump since along last May, and the boardroom are buzzing anew with talk of another major trend widely supposed to be in the making. Dealings for the five and a half sessions ran to 17,860,780 shares, the heaviest turnover since the week ended July 22 last. Broker, speculator and investor agree in pronouncing it one of the most satisfactory market weeks in a long time.

Nears July High.

The market is now within five points of its high mark of last July. The industrial group is approximately at its September high, having advanced as much as seven points in the face of some complications of wide vogue. Railroad shares are making a strong bid for leadership but are yet some eight or ten points below the levels they achieved before the list began to turn down with business early last fall.

Utility stocks are higher in public favor than they have been for months. But they have had such tough sledding, what with the rate reduction movement, government competition through the Muscle Shoals project and one thing and another, that they still have a tremendous lot of ground to cover before they can be said to have "come back" as speculative favorites.

Low Priced Shares Advance.

An interesting feature of the heavy trading of the last week was the fact that only six stocks were traded in less than $1 a share. At the beginning of 1933 it was estimated that more than 100 issues were selling below that mark. Recent strength in the market has resulted in a gradual elimination of the low priced issues. At one time last year not more than two active common stocks were selling above $100 a share, but currently a considerable number of active issues sell above $100 a share, including such stocks as American Telephone and Telegraph, American Can, Allied Chemical, Norfolk and Western, and Union Pacific. One issue, Honesdale Mining, is above $300 a share.

Incidentally last week's upturn began almost six months to the day after the elimination of the spring and early summer bull drive last July.

Other Reasons for Gains.

While the President's message, removing to a very large extent the uncertainty that prevailed regarding his monetary plans, was the big over-riding motive for the sudden right about of speculative sentiment there were a number of secondary factors to give solidity and impetus to the buying movement, among them being steel production figures somewhat more than double those of a year ago and still pointing upward, weekly freight loadings a good deal in excess of those for the corresponding period of last January and only 3 per cent below those of 1931, and the stimulus to trade promoted by the government's plans for large scale spending this spring and summer.

The current surge, however, the monetary message was the one "development" most needed to set off the movement for which the market had been for so long primed. Brokerage house letter writers had been drumming it in chorus for a long time that real progress could be anticipated until some move toward stabilization was undertaken.

Public on Sidelines.

Most of the public had retired to the sidelines determined to withhold all inclination to commitments either way until the situation was clarified and the future of the dollar could be guessed at with some degree of assurance. The same uncertainty, it was agreed, was holding business recovery in check. Now, with the fog lifted to some extent, many feel that business may begin to pick up anew in various directions and that the much discussed "spring movement" in stocks which the trading fraternity has come to regard as a matter of course may get under way. At any rate the upturn of the last week showed that the speculative fraternity is out to wage more or less heavily on the probability.

Another count in the street's bullishness of the movement is the inflationary potentialities of the administration's financing plans expected to be made known within the next week or so. Many expect the inflation from that source to begin to click marketwise by summer or fall at the latest.

Department Store Sales in Gotham Aided by Liquor

New York, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Liquor apparently has been a big factor in recent sales gains for department stores in this district. The New York Federal Reserve bank reports that from Jan. 2 to Jan. 16 sales volume of these establishments in New York City was 2.1 per cent above a year ago. Excluding liquor business, the rise was only 6 per cent. For the whole metropolitan area the aggregate was up 8.2 per cent, whereas with liquor sales omitted the gain amounted to 6.4 per cent.

RETAIL SALES IN RISE
HERE; WHOLESALE TONE
DISPLAYS BUOYANCY

Retailers and wholesalers in Chicago reported another good week for the period ended last Saturday, according to the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Aided by Dollar Day, staged Friday, retail sales showed an appreciable gain both over the preceding week and the same period a year ago. The southeast and southwest had continued demands on the jobbers although there was no sign of any curtailment elsewhere. Collections and commitments for future delivery are continuing satisfactory.

Fear that reductions in hours and personnel by the CWA may have a discouraging effect on local business was discounted by prominent spokesmen for the emergency work organization. With prospects for early untangling of several important PWA projects and a steady although gradual upward trend in commercial and industrial employment, representatives of the federal administration think the newly made slack will be gradually and permanently absorbed.

Along automobile row, there are expectations for an active fortnight. Early sales of models being pushed at the New York show and to be displayed here late this month are in many cases exceeding expectations. Packagers, utilities, and railroads all indicate gratification over recent developments.

PRICE DECLINES
HIT RUMANIAN
FINANCE PLANS

New York, Jan. 21.—Rumania's foreign trade and balance of payments have been affected seriously by the decline in prices of her principal commodities and by the worldwide depression of the market for her exports.

Early sales of models being pushed at the New York show and to be displayed here late this month are in many cases exceeding expectations. Packagers, utilities, and railroads all indicate gratification over recent developments.

"The smallest as well as the largest producer shared in these benefits and was given equitable consideration by the planning and coordinating committee in working out this basic problem of production control and control as well as great will be equally considered when the refinery and marketing problems are taken up as next in order."

DETROIT EDISON
1933 NET PROFIT
PUT AT $6,350,293

New York, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Net profit of the Detroit Edison company for the year 1933 totaled $6,350,293 against $6,879,765 in 1932.

In a lengthy letter to shareholders which covered every phase of the company's operations during the year, Alex Dow, president, said more than half of the decrease was in sales to commercial services, such as stores and small consumers who take current at secondary voltages.

He revealed that the company had cash on hand amounting to $4,706,792, compared with $4,861,917 at the end of 1932, but this was offset by a new item on the balance headed "deposits in banks and trust companies closed or under restrictions" amounting to $2,445,698.

In the concluding paragraph of his letter Mr. Dow said: "Business is not quite so bad as it has been. We would like to say it is better, but 'better' is the comparative of 'good,' and we have not yet arrived at good business."

WIRT FRANKLIN
TELLS HOW CODE
AIDS OIL GROUP

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Adoption of a code for the oil industry was credited by Wirt Franklin, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, in a statement today with eliminating wasteful production and below cost sales and with practically doubling the value of crude oil.

Evidence of the destructive loss suffered by the oil industry before the adoption of the oil code," Franklin said, "is shown by the fact that at the first eight months in 1933 hardly a single oil state received as much for its oil produced as the same state received for half that quantity during the last four months of the year when wasteful production and sale below cost were largely eliminated."

Advance in Receipts.

"The total production of crude oil in the states of Arkansas, California, Colorado, Kansas, Louisiana, Michigan, Montana, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Texas, and Wyoming during the first eight months of 1933 was 290,751,000 barrels, for which was received approximately $125,807,000."

"During the last four months in the year, with production curtailed under federal restriction, only 126,224,000 barrels were produced, or less than half the production in the period twice as long but for which the oil industry in those states received $117,545,000."

"In other words, producing half the amount of oil netted almost the same returns during the last four months of 1933 as was received during the first eight months in the same year."

All Share Gains.

"The smallest as well as the largest producer shared in these benefits and was given equitable consideration by the planning and coordinating committee in working out this basic problem of production control and control as well as great will be equally considered when the refinery and marketing problems are taken up as next in order."

"This reduction, small in the grand total and relatively insignificant when the individual producer's quota is considered, eliminated the demoralization which can always be created by even a slight overproduction beyond the needs of the nation."

"In accordance with this agreement, the bondholders' representatives consented to the suspension of sinking fund payments from Jan. 1, 1935, to March 31, 1935. Upon the request of the Rumanian government this period may be extended for an additional year. The agreement to suspend sinking fund payments does not apply to the 4 per cent external loan of 1925 and the Monopolies Institute 7 1/2 per cent development loan of 1931, on which it was agreed that the sinking fund drawings were to be replaced by purchases in the open market."

U.S. Holds Key to Use of Gold,
View of Keynes

[Copyright: 1934, By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Jan. 21.—J. M. Keynes in an article in the New Statesman concerning President Roosevelt's gold policy "says that unless prices in America rise far more than seems likely France's position will be very difficult and probably untenable. But, he adds, inasmuch as America has now returned to gold within certain limits of fluctuation, France is free to rectify her position by altering her own gold parity, while England is free to allow sterling to depreciate on the franc or appreciate on the dollar, or to enjoy or suffer a bit of both."

"Roosevelt has virtually offered this country and France an invitation to a monetary conference," continues Mr. Keynes, "and at the same time has set sufficient limits to the uncertainty of his own future policy to provide a basis for discussion. Apart from the difficulties of transition, I see nothing in the President's scheme which need upset us and much we should do well to approve."

Favors High Value for Gold.

"It is true the rest of us will not find it easy to come to terms with him unless we substantially accept his view as to the future value of gold in terms of the leading world currencies. But why not? A high value for gold is, in fact, in our interest as much as in his."

"The task of coming to terms with the President gets more anxious problems for gold currency countries than for us. It is reasonably certain the existing gold value of the franc and florin can scarcely be compatible in the long run with the new gold value of the dollar. The gold currency countries have to choose whether they will embark on an expensive campaign probably doomed to ultimate failure or whether they will eat some of their many unnecessary brave words about maintaining existing parities of gold at all costs. If in the end the result of the President's action is to knock them off their gold perches that will surely be in the interest of their citizens."

HART-SCHAFFNER HAS DEFICIT FOR FISCAL YEAR OF $2,238,667

Hart, Schaffner & Marx reported an operating loss of $683,654 for the fiscal year ended Nov. 30 and a total loss of $2,238,667 after write down of subsidiary capital assets and anticipated losses on capital assets.

Despite the loss for the full year operations in the last 6 months of the period showed substantial improvement. Chairman Mark W. Cressap and President Alexander M. Levy said in their letter to stockholders.

In 1933 the company incurred an operating loss of $2,327,777 and a total loss of $3,916,729 after non-recurring charges.

Reserves set up in 1933 brought unappropriated surplus down to $1,091,965 from $3,329,723 a year earlier. The year and balance sheet showed current assets of $7,116,888 and current liabilities of $761,366, a ratio of 9 to 1. At the end of 1932 the company's current ratio was 16 to 1.

NEW YORK STATE
OFFERING TODAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 21.—New York state will offer tomorrow a new issue of $50,000,000 of one year 2 per cent notes. Controller Morris S. Tremaine will open the subscription books in his office in the New York State building, and will allow the notes to banks and banking houses at par. Not more than $5,000,000 is to be sold to any one institution.

The notes will be dated Jan. 25, 1934, and will be payable from revenues of the next fiscal year. The proceeds will be used for current expenses of the state. The rate of 2 per cent on the new issue compares with 2 1/2 per cent on the United States treasury on its issue of $50,000,000 of one year certificates offered in mid-December.

On Friday the state paid off in cash its maturing issue of $50,000,000 of one year 1 per cent notes, so that tomorrow's financing does not represent a refunding operation. Excluding the maturing issue the state has $115,000,000 of notes outstanding.

The London economist does not agree with President Roosevelt's American critics who have denounced as "robbery" his impounding of the gold on the federal reserve bank's gold.

"It is more logical," says the economist, "to regard it as a tax on unearned increment, since the profit arose entirely out of the government's actions regarding the dollar. A similar profit was taken by the governments of most European countries which devalued their currencies after the war, and should the pound ever be devalued the profit on the gold holding of the Bank of England would under the terms of the currency act of 1928 automatically accrue to the treasury."

STEEL OUTPUT GAINS 5 POINTS
TO 35 PER CENT

Under the impact of increasing business from automotive and miscellaneous manufacturing industries steel output expanded five points to 35 per cent of capacity last week, reports the magazine Steel.

A considerable part of the current output of raw steel, however, is for stock designed to meet the heavy demand expected later in the quarter, the review concludes.

"Seldom has there been such a unanimity of opinion as exists now respecting the upward trend of business," Steel declares. "Confidence of consumers is being transmitted to producers. A higher volume of buying is noted in practically all districts."

Auto Needs Speed Operations.

"Automotive requirements are breaking through the entanglements incident to mechanical changes in models, and are the first of the important deferred classifications to accelerate finishing mill operations. Releases are coming through more regularly, and have lifted some northern Ohio sheet mill schedules nearly to capacity."

Prerequisites for obtaining federal loans are helping to delay business from the railroads, the Journal states. Car builders have been accorded an extension of time in which to make purchases. The Boston and Maine is asking for a federal loan to buy 20,000 tons of rails and fastenings. A change in the design of the New York, New Haven and Hartford angle bars is delaying an order for 10,000 tons of fastenings.

Structural Shape Decline.

Structural shape awards for the week declined to 14,415 tons from 28,253 tons in the preceding week. Producers expect to be busier next month than at any time in the last three years. Chicago is taking in a sanitary project requiring 10,000 tons of reinforcing steel, and Boston on 2,500 tons of cast pipe. Providence, R. I., has bought 6,000 tons of cast pipe.

STABLE DOLLAR

COMMODITIES MOVE HIGHER, INFLUENCED BY MONEY PROGRAM

Secondary Liens Do Best; Trading Swells.

New York, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Bonds during the last week marked President Roosevelt's announcement of a new monetary program with their best performance since the flush days of the spring-summer boom.

Although secondary, or semi-speculative, issues were in greatest demand, prime investment loans more than held their own and United States government securities, while turning rather dull, were half a point or more higher than where they started the week.

The market apparently interpreted President Roosevelt's message to Congress regarding the devaluation of the dollar to between 50 and 60 per cent of its former parity as a long step toward eventual stabilization of the new proposal to impound the gold holdings of the federal reserve system, amounting to some $3,600,000,000, was not altogether a surprise.

Trading Swells.

Increased speculative interest was apparent in nearly all commodity markets. Corn, barley, hides and steel were the only commodities that failed to show an advance.

Rubber, sharply higher, influenced to a considerable extent by reports of an international agreement might be reached to reduce production.

U. S. RELIEF

Banks Are Given Another Large Slice.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

New York, Jan. 21.—The farmer will receive 1 billion 883 million dollars from all sources in the fiscal year ending on June 30 from the huge government spending program for which 6 billion 375 million dollars already have been appropriated, Moody's Investors' Service estimates in the current issue of its monthly review and outlook.

The banks will receive 1 billion 830 million dollars, and expenditures of 1 billion 229 million dollars are contemplated for building. It is explained that these figures are exclusive of 1 billion 168 million dollars in appropriations which may be made by congress at this session.

Of the 1 billion 883 million dollars allotted to agriculture in the current fiscal year, 500 million dollars has already been spent. The amount allotted to farmers includes 1 billion, 368 million dollars classed as "emergencies" to be spent for loans on agricultural surplus, loans for exports, crop loans, mortgage relief, and other purposes, plus 515 million dollars of benefits from the ordinary budget for crop reductions under the Agricultural Adjustment administration.

Will Aid Depositors.

"Bank depositors, especially in the weaker banks, as well as business dependent on the banks in the current season," will be aided by the 1 billion 830 million dollars to be expended in this direction. Of the total, 1 billion 630 million dollars is in the form of loans and proceeds from sale of preferred stock and bonds to the RFC, plus 150 million dollars federal deposit insurance fund and 50 million dollars for preferred stock of the new federal savings and loan associations.

"Financial institutions and home owners will benefit from the 457 million dollars not included in the figure for banks, to be expended for the refinancing of home mortgages.

Help for Retail Trade.

"Retail trade will benefit indirectly from practically all types of expenditures. It will, moreover, receive considerable stimulus from the large group of expenditures which find their way directly to consumers in the form of direct relief or pay rolls. These aggregate 1 billion 205 million dollars, composed of state relief, $463 million; Civil Works administration, 400 million; conservation work, $43 million.

"The amount spent in this group may actually prove larger if additional appropriations out of the contemplated total of 1 billion 168 million dollars are voted for the extension of the CWA and other relief.

"After reaching consumers these sums will, of course, tend to be spent by them in many different directions, but it may be observed that the bulk will be paid for food, clothing, and similar necessities. Retail trade, therefore, is the broad industrial group that will first feel the benefit of these expenditures."

TRADING ON CURB MOVE FORWARD

New York, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The curb market was swept higher last week in the heaviest trading since last July. Prices bounded up sharply on Monday following President Roosevelt's message to congress relative to his new monetary policy. Heavy profit taking followed, but was absorbed steadily. Later sessions witnessed a resumption of the advance, with buying conducted over a wide front.

Utilities were favorites on the upturn. American Gas and Electric and Electric Bond and Share moved substantially higher in heavy trading. The Cities Service issues improved and a number of wide advances were scored by less active common and preferred shares, including Common and Preferred, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, and Columbia Gas and Electric preferred.
